New Wave Of Sub-Zero Cold Strikes Midlands

South Suffers Its Second Freeze in Week; Nation Free Of Major Storms

Warmest and Wettest

JANUARY, 1949, was Washington's warmest and wettest January in 12 years. Story on Page 15.

Relief Stepped Up

New sub-zero cold froze the Northern midlands yesterday and the South suffered its second consecutive hard freeze, but for the first time in a month the Nation was free of major storms.

The mercury went more than 20 degrees below zero in Wyoming, Idaho, Colorado, the Dakotas, Montana, Nebraska and Minnesota, and there were scattered light snow flurries.

But disaster relief stepped up as the Army smashed thousands of bulldozers through the Western snows to liberate isolated towns and starving livestock. Hundreds of planes took to overcast skies and dropped everything from 5-ton bales of hay to tiny vials of medicine.

The problem remained tremendous.

Burn Furniture for Heat

People were burning furniture for heat in South Dakota. Record floods were more than a possibility. An estimated 3000 Navajo Indians in Arizona and their flocks and one entire Nebraska county are still isolated.

In Washington, Weather Bureau experts were worried about a storm which had come from Alaska to Alberta in little more than 24 hours. Its entry into the United States would be between North Dakota and Montana.

In the South, freezing cold struck again at the citrus orchards and vegetable gardens of southern Texas, strawberry beds in Louisiana, and Georgia peach orchards. A wide belt from Texas to North Carolina reported "partly cloudy and continued cold," with minimum temperatures of 20 above.

Smudge Pots Out

In southern California, which was boasting of its warm 57 temperatures Monday, smudge pots were burning last night in many valleys. Burbank and Los Angeles reported temperatures in the low 30s yesterday morning.

Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, commanding the disaster relief operation from Omaha, Nebr., said task forces had freed 250 families in Valentine, Nebr., and broken through 100 miles of snow-clogged roads to reach another 450 persons near Broken Bow, Nebr.

Pick said 296 big bulldozers were working in Nebraska, with 209 more en route.

Concentrates in Nebraska

The Red Cross was concentrating its relief efforts in Nebraska. Washington headquarters reported the Red Cross had chartered 22 small planes which made hundreds of ski landings at isolated settlements and dropped thousands of bundles of food and fuel to 1095 families in Nebraska, and 3200 in South Dakota.

In Arizona the Bureau of Indian Affairs called upon the Navy for aid in flying doctors and food

Thirteen Belvoir Officers Off for Blizzard Duty

Thirteen officers from Fort Belvoir, Va., have left for at least 30 days of blizzard relief duty with the Missouri River Division of the Corps of Engineers in Omaha, Nebr.

All heavy equipment experts, the men will supervise the disposition of bulldozers and "weasels" used in battling through to isolated ranchers and livestock.

Fourteen bulldozer operators from Fort Belvoir also have been alerted to leave for the disaster area when needed.

Has Bullet in His Head . . .

THE INDOMITABLE—A bullet hole in his forehead and a wide grin on his face, 7-year-old David Rollins sits in a doctor's office in Tulsa, Okla., awaiting removal of the .22-caliber rifle slug. Commission Asks 200,000 DP Increase

Congress Is Also Urged to Remove 'Discriminations'

By The Associated Press

Congress yesterday was urged to lift immigration bars for nearly 200,000 more war refugees, and to wipe out alleged "discrimination" against Jews and others.

If Congress approves, a total of 400,000 homeless Europeans would be brought to the United States within the next four years.

The Displaced Person Commission made the recommendation in a report saying the refugees should be chosen without regard to race, religion or national origin. They should also be admitted, the commission said, without being charged against future moral immigration quotas.

The commission, consisting of three men, administers the act governing admission of displaced persons to the United States which Congress passed last summer Members are appointed by the President.

The three-man commission proposed numerous other major changes in the controversial legislation, enacted by the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress, which President Truman criticized when he signed the measure last year.

In its present form, the commission said, the law is "all but unworkable." The group reported that at the end of 1948, only 2507 refugees had reached the United States.

Chairman Ugo Carusi told newsmen that if Congress accepts the commission's recommendations, the whole problem of finding new homes for World War II refugees "should just about be cleared up."

Carusi said there are about 770,000 still left, most of them living in camps in the western occupation zones of Germany and Austria, and in Italy.

Pardons Asked By Prosecutor For 2 D. C. Men

New Evidence Found After Convictions in December Sex Case

Pardons of two District men were asked yesterday by the prosecutor who last December convinced a Prince Georges County jury they were guilty of assault with intent to rape.

The men are Paul C. Fugitt, 31, and Frank F. Cowens, 41, who are now serving five-year terms in the Maryland State Penitentiary. They were convicted on the complaint of Mrs. Mary Viola Johnson, 43, of 1218½ 6th st. se., mother of four children.

State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie of Prince Georges County disclosed yesterday he has sent a letter to Governor William Preston Lane, jr., requesting pardons for Fugitt and Cowens on the basis of new evidence that has been uncovered since the trial.

In his letter to Lane, Bowie said "certain information" was furnished him after the trial that led to the questioning of two persons whose testimony would have been all-important at the trial.

"After due and very careful consideration," he added, "I am satisfied . . . that had they testified at the trial, there would have been an acquittal of both defendants."

Bowie wrote Lane he was "acting on the theory that a State's attorney's obligations with respect to administration of justice are not necessarily fulfilled when a trial ends and the defendant is sentenced."

He told the Governor that his request for pardons had the approval of Circuit Court Judge Charles Marbury, who presided at the trial and sentenced the men to prison last December 9.

Commenting on his letter, Bowie said: "If that testimony had been introduced into the trial, they would have been acquitted in 15 minutes."

During the trial, Mrs. Johnson testified she joined Fugitt and

Tells How He'd Run Things

'Work Simplifier' Would Fire Most Wives for Inefficiency

New York, Feb. 1 (U.P.)—Most wives should be fired because they are so inefficient, a fearless male said today.

Gideon M. Varga, an industrial engineer and lecturer on work simplification at Columbia University, writing in American Magazine, told the Nation's 20 million housewives how he would run things if he were a homemaker.

"Most of our wives are so wasteful of their time and energy that no modern industrial concern in its right mind would want them on the payroll," Varga declares blandly.

The trouble with women, he continues calmly:

1. They do too much groping and searching. A New Jersey housewife found she saved 10 miles walking a year when she placed her dishpan and soap at the sink instead of in 2 cupboards 6 and 9 feet away, Varga said.

2. They do too much running back and forth. Housewives trot at least one billion needless miles a year because they believe like objects should be stored together. It isn't so, says Varga. Things should be stored where they are used first.

What's more, if the little woman had any sense, she'd make one side of a bed completely before moving to the other, or put brass eyelets at the corners of sheets and blankets to hook them into place. She now walks about 170 feet while making up one bed.

3. They do too many unnecessary chores. To name only a few: they iron sheets, underwear, bath towels and pajamas, dry dishes although it's more sanitary to drain them.

4. They abuse their backs and feet. What this country needs, he believes, is a high kitchen chair and rocker in every kitchen. Women should sit while they wash dishes, iron or work at kitchen counters.

5. They woolgather and don't stick to their jobs until finished. Housewives should advertise they're not available for party-line chatter during certain hours, he thinks.

Senate Unit Votes Labor Bill Speed-Up

(See "People," Page 2.)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Education and Labor Committee last night voted a speed-up of hearings on the Administration's labor bill in a drive to conclude testimony by February 10.

Day and night sessions, starting at 9:30 a. m. and running through 10 p. m. except when the Senate is in session were ordered by the committee.

Sunday hearings only were excepted in the race to pass the bill. The "stretch out" on the labor measure was recommended by a subcommittee headed by Senator James E. Murray (D., Mont.) after the committee in two morning sessions failed to finish questioning the Administration's first three witnesses.

Opposed One Proposal

One of the three, Director Cyrus S. Ching of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, frankly didn't speak for the Administration on one of the key provisions of the bill.

Testifying yesterday, Ching opposed Mr. Truman's proposal to transfer the Conciliation Service back to the Labor Department, saying it would "seriously damage the effectiveness of Government mediation."

The committee will resume today at the regular 10 a. m. starting hour with Paul M. Herzog, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, who wasn't reached yesterday. Then Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin will be called back and questioned without a deadline for the day.

Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) said the speed-up schedule will start Thursday morning, with the first four days set aside for proponents of the bill and the last four reserved for the opposition.

Urging Congress to maintain the agency's "impartial" and independent status, Ching hit the proposal to transfer the conciliation agency as "a step backward in the terribly important job of strengthening our industrial democracy."

Backs Away From Any Stand

But the conciliation chief backed away from any stand on suspended use of Government injunctions in national emergency strikes.

He told the committee, however:

"I don't think the Government should go beyond protecting the health and safety of the people in its emergency powers."

He said this did not mean he recommended use of injunctions in such strikes, adding:

"All I am saying is this, that the power of Government must be used to protect the Government in case of emergency. What method to use is a question of political science."

The Canadian immigrant, who started his American career as a streetcar motorman in Boston said Congress shouldn't pass a "get even" labor law, but should build for "sound relations."

Puffing at a pipe, the 6-foot--7-inch Ching said that as mediation officer he didn't want to pass on controversial features of the bill but some of the Senators steered him close to the controversy line.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), who questioned him for

Axis Sally Played Role, Actor Says

Testimony About Drama Offered at Treason Trial as 'Overt Act Proof'

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

A handsome 33-year-old actor who, although half-Jewish, participated in Nazi propaganda radio broadcasts under duress, yesterday pointed out Miss Mildred S. (Axis Sally) Gillars as having played a leading role in one of the broadcasts.

His testimony, Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr. told Federal Judge Edward M. Curran in District Court, was "offered in proof of overt act Number 10."

[The tenth overt act of treason cited in the indictment against Miss Gillars concerns participation in a drama, "Vision of Invasion." Two witnesses to an overt act are required under the law to gain a treason conviction.]

The actor Ullrich Haupt, dark-haired, stocky and speaking perfect English, told the court he was born in Chicago of a German actor father and a Jewish mother.

He said he attended schools in America and Germany and at the death of his father in 1930, took up residence in Germany with his mother and a brother.

Feared Nazi Reprisals

Asked by Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin what would have happened had he refused to participate in the broadcasts, Haupt answered:

"My mother, my wife, my three children and I would have been sent to a concentration camp."

"And in danger of being shot?" pursued Laughlin.

"That would have been mild," Haupt replied with a half-smile.

[Another Government witness, Adalbert Houben, former German radio official, had testified previously that no non-German was ever forced to take part in broadcasts. Yesterday Haupt, in answer to questions by Kelley, made it clear he was a German citizen at the time he appeared on the programs. He has since been granted United States citizenship. Miss Gillars is an American citizen.]

The witness, who said he was never a Nazi Party member, told the court that he was at a microphone within 25 feet of Miss Gillars during the 1944 broadcast of "Vision of Invasion" from a German studio.

Played Part of Mother

Miss Gillars, he said, played the part of Evelyn, mother of an American soldier depicted as killed during an invasion of Europe.

Also in the cast, he said, were a George Heinrich Schnell and two other actors—a "Jimmie Stuart" and a "Mr. Ludwig." Haupt said he, himself, portrayed Allan, the soldier-son of Evelyn.

[A recorder "playback" of the drama was heard over earphones in the courtroom Monday. The play stressed the "slaughter" of American soldiers and blamed Roosevelt for the war.]

Coolly answering questions fired at him by Laughlin during cross-examination, Haupt said he was deferred from army service at the request of the theatrical industry and "commanded" to participate in broadcasts as part of the war effort.

His younger brother, Hans, was killed on the Russian front while

Norway Tells Russia She Must Seek Security In Regional Alliances

Position Is Defined In Reply to Soviet Note Asking Views On Atlantic Pact

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 1 (U.P.). Norway told the Soviet Union tonight that it is necessary for her to seek her security in regional pacts such as the proposed North Atlantic alliance which would bind the United States and Canada to western Europe.

But Norway assured Russia she will never agree to foreign military bases on her soil "as long as Norway is not attacked or the subject for threats of attack."

And she pledged herself to support a policy of nonaggression.

Norway's position was set forth in an answer to the Soviet Union's note asking her to clarify her view of the proposed North Atlantic pact.

U. N. Held Insufficient

A Foreign Office spokesman said the communication to Moscow should be called a "reply" or a "declaration," but not a "note."

Norway said the United Nations had failed to provide the world with peace and security and her own people's "serious concern" for their liberty "has convinced the government that it is necessary to seek increased security through regional cooperation in the defense field."

"Regional pacts of this kind are expressly provided for in the United Nations Charter and are, in the opinion of the Norwegian government, in accordance with the aims of the Charter as far as prevention of aggression is concerned," the reply added.

Then it referred to the collapse on Sunday of Scandinavian mutual defense talks.

Welcomes Opportunity

"In these circumstances," and in view of Norway's position on the Atlantic sea coast and her history as a seafaring country, the government has decided to investigate the Atlantic pact."

Norway said she welcomed the opportunity to express her views on her security and political problems to the Soviet government and ended her reply as follows:

"Norway and Russia have lived side by side as neighboring countries since time immemorial, and the Norwegian government is convinced that the government of the USSR knows our country's unbroken traditions in the work for peace and our desire to continue in friendly relations with all peace-loving peoples."

The State Department was obviously pleased last night by Norway's apparent determination to line up with the Atlantic powers despite Russian pressure.

Where British Navy Reigned

Dominant World Affairs Role For U. S. Air Force Forecast

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

American air power may occupy within five or six years the dominant, settling role in world affairs exercised by British sea power in days past, Defense Secretary James Forrestal said yesterday.

But, he added, as the future military picture is not yet clear, we must move cautiously in the development of our defense forces. Bombers now require overseas bases to be effective, and so balanced land, sea and air forces must be maintained for the present.

In a frank talk and question-and-answer session at the National Press Club, the Defense chief discussed the major controversial points of current military policy and some of the issues in which he has been the target of criticism.

He said new legislation is needed to achieve greater unification of the armed forces, but declared the "main thing" is to gradually replace partisan, one-service loyalty by a "greater sense of loyalty" to the over-all national defense.

To this end, Forrestal disclosed, two concrete moves are in view:

1. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has taken on the job of reconsidering the over-all military education system with a view to eliminating "narrow service loyalty."

2. Legislation will be proposed to permit officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force to transfer from one service to the other.

In nearly an hour's talk, the Defense Secretary touched on such varied issues as military vs. civil control, the budget, his own politics and big carriers and B-36 bombers. He handily fielded several "curve ball" queries.

"In the person of Harry Truman," said Forrestal, "we have the most rocklike example of civilian control I think the world has ever seen."

To clear up "misapprehensions" about the military budget, he explained a 30-billion-dollar 1950 outlay had never been recom-

Truman Sure U. S. Can Avoid A Depression

Nation Must Remain Sound, He Says, as No. 1 Leader in World

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman, who got into politics when the 1921 slump left him a "busted merchant," expressed confidence last night that the United States will be able to stave off an economic depression in the future.

He said it was "absolutely essential" that this country remain sound and prosperous because of its No. 1 place in the world. He added that it had to face up to this leadership, and plan for the welfare of the world, or else see the world go back to the darkness of the ninth century.

Mr. Truman's remarks, delivered in off the cuff fashion, were made at the annual banquet of the National Planning Association in the Statler. He arrived after the dinner had been served, wearing a tan business suit, and was introduced by H. Christian Sonne, chairman of the board of the association as "a great planner."

"I know I have missed an excellent dinner by being late," Mr. Truman said, smiling, "but I had to have at least one night this week with the 'boss' (Mrs. Truman) at home at Blair House."

Mr. Truman, in his talk, answered those who have labeled his program communistic; spoke frankly of going broke in the haberdashery business after World War I; predicted "cries and wails" over the Hoover plan for reorganization of the Government, and told amidst laughter, how he has to spend much time "kissing" Government people to get them to do what they ought to do.

The Chief Executive told of what had been done in his Administration to head off an economic disaster in the United States. He mentioned especially the Employment Act of 1946, which created the Council of Economic Advisers headed by Dr. Edwin G. Nourse and the Economic Commit-

Armistice Talk Bid Sent All Arab Nations

King Abdullah Backs Bunche Proposal for Parley With Israel

Rhodes, Feb. 1 (AP).—United Nations Mediator Ralph J. Bunche proposed today armistice talks between Israel and all the Arab nations at war with her.

King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan promptly indorsed the plan, and called upon his Arab allies to join in such a meeting.

Bunche's proposal was disclosed in Amman, the Trans-Jordan capital, as armistice talks here between Israel and Egypt hung in delicate balance. A reliable source said Israel had rejected the so-called "Bunche line" solution which the mediator proposed to break the conference deadlock.

Informants said Bunche had suggested that Israel give up certain portions of the potentially rich Negev desert in Palestine. The Jews occupied these areas in bitter fighting, and told Bunche that talk of giving them up now is not realistic.

Actual talks between Israel and Egypt are at a standstill until an Egyptian emissary returns Monday with Cairo's answer to Bunche's proposals.

Abdullah said the proposed armistice conference with all the Arab nations might be the key to peace in the Holy Land. His Arab Legion was Israel's most powerful enemy in the Palestine war.

A report from Israel said Rhodes also might be the scene of the all-Arab talks. The dispatch reported Israel already had asked Trans-Jordan to send an armistice delegation to Rhodes after the talks with Egypt are concluded.

Israel and Trans-Jordan already have a cease-fire agreement covering the Jerusalem area. Feeling between the two countries has subsided.

Israel's cabinet announced in Tel Aviv it has abolished the office of military governor of the Jewish section of the Holy City, and a civil administration is taking over. The Arab Legion holds the old

Owes $59,552, U. S. Charges

Head of D. C. Businessmen's Unit Indicted as Tax Evader

The president of the Washington Federation of Businessmen's Associations was indicted by a Federal grand jury in Baltimore yesterday on charges of shortchanging the Government $59,552 on income taxes.

He is Benjamin Striner, 40, a retired doctor of pharmacy, of 7800 Orchid st. nw.

Striner once operated Striner Drugs at 2921 Nichols ave. se. He is a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations from the District Pharmaceutical Association.

The indictment charged Striner's income for the four years, 1942-1945, was $139,450, but that he reported only $26,613.

Assistant United States District Attorney James S. Morrow told the grand jury Striner still owes the Government $5972 for 1942 $23,527 for 1943, $9926 for 1944, and $20,126 for 1945.

The indictment contained four counts, one for each year of alleged attempted income tax evasion. Morrow said Striner faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in jail, and a $40,000 fine. The case will be tried in Federal District Court, Baltimore, in from six weeks to two months, Morrow said.

Striner said yesterday he knew the Government had been periodically checking his income-tax returns, but he understood no charges would be pressed. The indictment came as a complete surprise to him, he said, and "doesn't sound right."

Retired in 1944 as a result of ill health, Striner said he personally prepared his own income-tax returns.

Policeman Shot After Arrest Of Two Men at Food Market

A policeman was shot through the jaw and wounded on the hip last night after he surprised and arrested two men breaking into a food market at 1420 7th st. nw.

The policeman, Pvt. Shelton H. Nuttall, jr., 35, attached to the Second Precinct, was taken to Freedmen's Hospital. He is married, has two children and lives at 523 21st st. ne.

Police threw all available manpower into the area after the shooting and four suspects were picked up within a short time.

Two of the suspects were cleared when Nuttall confronted them at the hospital and said they were not his assailants. The other two men were being questioned at the Second Precinct Station.

Accordingly to police, Nuttall had been "planted" in plain clothes at 7th and O sts. nw., and at about 10:45 p. m. saw two men trying to break into The Food Fair, a market at 1420 7th st. nw.

He placed the men under arrest and led them across the street to the police call box on the northeast corner.

He had called for a patrol wagon and while they waited by the call box the men pleaded with him to give them "a chance" and let them go.

One of the men whipped out a .38 caliber nickel-plated revolver and fired point-blank at Nuttall.

As the men fled east on O st., Nuttall fired five shots at them from his service revolver and police said he may have struck one or both of the men. Police asked all hospitals and doctors to be on the lookout for men seeking treatment of gunshot wounds.

In their haste, both men lost their hats, one lost his shoes and they dropped the revolver used to shoot the policemen. From O st.,

Worker Cleared In Fatal Strike Riot Shooting

Waterloo, Iowa, Feb. 1 (AP).—Fred Lee Roberts, 55-year-old Dunkerton, Iowa, Negro, was found innocent tonight in a manslaughter case growing out of a riot at the strike-bound Rath Packing Co. plant last May 19.

Roberts had pleaded self-defense in the slaying of William (Chuck) Farrell, a striking CIO packinghouse worker. Farrell was shot when Roberts fired a revolver after his car was stopped by a crowd outside the Rath plant entrance. Roberts was driving to his job as night cleanup man at the time. He claimed he shot into the air "in terror" after members of the crowd began shaking the car and crying out, "kill the jig."

"Fred Roberts was determined to go to work, no matter what happened, even if he had to shoot somebody," special prosecutor Robert Buckmaster told the jury.

Defense Attorney F. W. Edwards told the jury, "They tried to intimidate Fred, but Fred didn't scare."

Cyrus Ching's 230-Pound Bulk Adds Force To His Labor-Management Peace Pleas

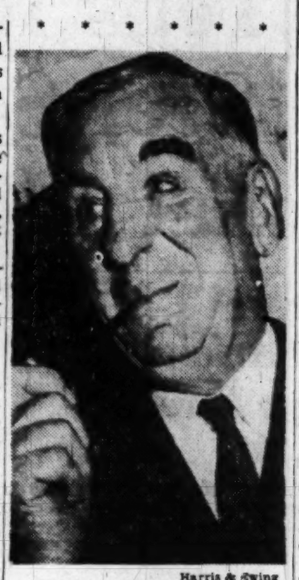
As one of the biggest men in Government (6 feet, 7½ inches tall; about 230 pounds), by physical standards alone Cyrus Stuart Ching is admirably able in the Nation's top "buffer" job.

* * * * * * *

"Cy" Ching's lumbering size undoubtedly has a psychological value in his peacemaker role as director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

But, more significant, he has personal experience on all three possible sides of labor-management issues: his varied background includes full-sized facets of labor, management, and Government work.

Briefly stated, his job can be described as keeping labor and management from turning bargaining disputes into physical and economic dogfights.



Harris & Ewing
CYRUS CHING
"5 feet 19½ inches tall"

List of Friends Grows

It could be easily expected that a man who has served on the hot spot as the country's No. 1 conciliator since September, 1947, would by this time have few friends left anywhere.

Instead, the reverse is true. Ching has more friends in Washington, and across the Nation, than when he accepted that post.

The personal respect tendered him can be typified by the fact that although he opposed the wishes of organized labor yesterday in arguing against transfer of his service back to the Labor Department, he still retains the personal friendship of labor—and of management interests.

Of course, he has had some clashes with both labor and management—which are generally soon followed by a return of an aura of good will.

In December, 1947, soon after he took over his present post, he announced to a National Association of Manufacturers' convention that, although he was an NAM member, they could expect nothing more from him than absolute fairness in labor disputes. To which, an industry man in the rear of the audience muttered, "Listen to that . . . he's been in Washington six weeks and he talks like one of those . . . already."

Criticized by Lewis

And voluble John L. Lewis, when refusing a request to attend a meeting of the Special Coal Inquiry Board last March, denounced in Lewis' prose two members of the board, and added, "In attendance is Ching, a truly remarkable man, who sees through the eyes of United States Rubber."

Those unfamiliar with Ching generally assume his surname is Chinese. It came from the opposite side of the world; he was born 72 years ago on Prince Edward Island, Canada, the son of farmers of Scottish ancestry, and the name is a derivative of the Welsh, Chynge.

He attended Prince of Wales College from 1893 to 1896, then returned to his father's farm, but "What I hated most," he was quoted as saying, "was digging potatoes."

In 1900, he was in Boston, working as a streetcar motorman, later an instructor and, by 1903, supervisor of equipment and service for the Boston Elevated Railway.

(He now avoids streetcars and buses completely, both because of his long association with them and the fact that the seats are too small for his bulk.)

There he had his first experience with labor relations, and deciding that the transit company's "spy system" was the employes' chief grievance, replaced it with cooperative aids to take the workmen into his confidence.

He became a United States citizen in 1909, and later got a law degree from Northeastern University, but in 1919 decided to enter the rubber industry. Typically, he telegraphed the president of United States Rubber, "I don't want a job. I want to help you run this company . . ."

At U. S. Rubber, his policy of stressing importance of individual employes, while director of industrial relations, brought unprecedented free and fair labor-management relations, which, in 1941, led to his appointment by President Roosevelt to the National Defense Mediation Board.

Later he served as chairman of the committee of the Office of Production Management and was an industry member of the War Labor Board. In the latter post, however, he disliked the WLB "directive" policy, saying, later, "The War Labor Board pushed people around," instead of winning cooperation.

A year ago, he told a reporter: "I want to convince the unions of the futility of strikes to gain their objectives. These problems all have to be settled eventually anyway and there is no reason for a strike until every available alternative is exhausted.

"I want to sell employers, too, on the idea that it is to their best interest to get along with unions."

Besides his frankness, gray-haired bulk, and easy charm, "Cy" Ching is particularly noteworthy around Washington for down-to-earth patriotism, difficulty in fitting into Pullman berths, a great fondness for fishing, and a vast collection of pipes—once counted at 86, but estimated by a close friend at "millions." He and his second wife, Mildred Vergosen (Virgie), live at 2540 Massachusetts ave. nw.

To frequent inquiries about his height, he smilingly replies, "5 feet, 19½ inches."

AFL to Publish Million-Copy Weekly Paper

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Miami, Fla., Feb. 1.—American Federation of Labor leaders, obviously pleased with their successful venture into big-time politics in the November elections, are planning to bolster their 1949 program with a national newspaper, Nation-wide radio show, and series of motion pictures.

AFL President William Green disclosed the plans here today after a meeting of the AFL administrative committee that supervises the activities of the 18-month-old Labor's League for Political Education.

The league was created by the AFL to oppose the reelection of members of Congress who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act and to support the election of candidates pledging repeal of that labor relations law.

With repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act virtually assured, the AFL is now preparing to turn the power of its political arm against labor-restrictive legislation in the States, with some 15 "little Taft-Hartley acts" as the principal targets.

"We feel just as strongly about these State-wide restrictions as we do about the Taft-Hartley Act," declared Joseph Keenan, director of the league.

Green said the AFL was raising some $750,000 through a 10-cents-a-month voluntary assessment of the membership to back up labor's league. He added that $40,000 of this fund had already been collected or committed by the participating international and national unions.

It was definitely decided today, Green said, to have the league publish a national weekly newspaper, aiming at an early circulation of one million and an eventual circulation of more than four million. The paper would keep a critical eye on the activities of Congress, and would seek to keep the AFL rank and file up to the minute on political events.

The newspaper will be started in Washington just as quickly as a staff can be organized and arrangements made for publication, according o Keenan.

Newcaster Is Sought

The radio program is still in the consideration stage, Green revealeded. The program would be a five-nights-a-week news broadcast, jointly sponsored by AFL and Labor's League, covering all news developments, and giving labor's point of view on the major issues. A nationally prominent newscaster is being sought for the program.

The moving pictures are still in the offing. Movies will be used to help the league, but just how is yet to be determined.

Keenan—a veteran trade unionist who earned his political experience in Chicago—disclosed that Delaware is the first State on the AFL's list. There the Republicans hold a 1-vote majority in both houses of the Legislature, according to Keenan, who believes enough of a defection can be made in GOP ranks to win repeal of Delaware's "little Taft-Hartley Act."

"Of all the State laws against organized labor, Delaware's are the worst" said Keenan.

Next on the list is Virginia, where an attempt will be made to lick the "Byrd machine," Keenan declared.

10-15 Pct. Food Price Drop Called Likely

Chicago, Feb. 1 (U.P.).—The president of the National Retail Grocers Association today predicted a "probable" food price decline of 10 to 15 per cent from 1948 levels within the next year.

C. C. Precure, a grocer from Britton, Okla., said prices had reached the bottom in some things like corn products but that other prices would come down to make the overall 10 to 15 per cent decrease.

Phone Workers Get Pay Hikes Of $3 and $4

Pay raises totaling more than $500,000 a year have been accepted by nearly 3000 union workers of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., most of them operators.

Under terms of the wage agreement, more than 2700 telephone operators will receive wage increases of $3 to $4. All increases are retroactive to January 16.

Mrs. Mary Gannon, president of Traffic Division No. 50, Communication Workers of America, said 1306 operators with 38 months' employment or less will receive $3 a week more and 1420 operators with more than 38 months' employment will get $4 a week increase.

In addition, she said, 120 dining service employes will get weekly pay raises of $2 or $3. 84 clerical workers will get an increase of $3, and 6 clerical workers will get an increase of $4.

F. G. Macarow, vice president and general manager of the company, said:

"These wage increases are in addition to the increases received regularly by employes under the company's wage progression schedules and boost the top rates for a five-day week from $48 to $52 for operators, from $57 to $61 for service assistants, and from $58 to $62 for traffic clerical forces.

"With this agreement all of the approximately 6600 employes represented by the two unions in Washington metropolitan area have received increased wages within the past months."

The other union is Traffic Division No. 36, CWA, which is composed of plant, commercial, accounting and other employes.

60 Flee Coal Mine Collapse; 14 Carbondale Homes Wrecked

Carbondale, Pa., Feb. 1 (AP).—The earth cracked open over an idle coal mine early today, dropping one house 8 feet into the ground and damaging 13 others in a three-block area.

Sixty persons fled in nightclothing, fearing an earthquake. Three were injured.

Loud underground rumblings warned of the coming cave-in. A 1200-square-foot area crumbled, the earth sagging as much as 40 feet some spots.

One house slid into a 25-foot hole. Others tilted precariously, their foundations and walls cracked by the sliding earth.

Water mains burst. Telephone and electric lines were ripped out. Escaping gas added more danger. State police roped off streets and highways leading into the area to protect property from looters. Firemen were on guard against fires or explosions.

Police estimated damage to the homes and surface areas at $100,000. No estimate was made of loss in the hard coal mine. Reports said valuable mine equipment was crushed.

Injured were Mrs. William Ezmon and her 6-month-old daughter, Jean, who were cut by falling plaster as they fled their home. Miss Mary McDonald, a schoolteacher, broke her arm when she tripped over a big hole in the street.

68-Million-Ton Steel Production In '49 Predicted

New Orleans, Feb. 1 (U.P.).—Irving S. Olds, chairman of the board of United States Steel Corporation, today predicted a record-breaking 68-million-ton steel production in 1949, and scoffed at suggestions that the Government go into the steel-making business.

"Last year," Olds said, "the steel industry shipped 65 million tons, the highest in history. Barring labor difficulties and other factors, the industry this year will ship 68 million tons."

Olds said "there's a great deal of difference between theoretical capacity and the actual production figure. On the whole, I think the industry is doing a good job. The steel industry is now launching a tremendous construction program. This apparently has been overlooked by Government experts who have been studying various curves."

London Charwomen Demand Pay Raises

London, Feb. 1 (U.P.).—The charwomen who sweep, dust and mop government offices shouldered their brooms and marched through London's streets today demanding a raise. The charwomen, who now get about 34 cents an hour, are asking 7 cents an hour more. The government has offered them an hourly raise equivalent to one-half of an American penny.

C & O Railroad Rehires 1000 Of 5500 Idled

Cleveland, Feb. 1 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. announced today that about 1000 employes have been rehired in its Chesapeake division after a layoff of more than a month.

Owing to a decline in freight business, the road laid off about 3000 workers in the Chesapeake division and about 2500 in the Pere Marquette division last December. None in the Pere Marquette division has been rehired, a C. & O. spokesman said.

He gave the following figures:

Richmond (Va.) division—laid off 218, recalled 69. Clifton Forge (Va.)—laid off 253, recalled 105. Hinton (W. Va.)—land off 107, recalled 21. Huntington (W. Va.)—laid off 377, recalled 116. Huntington shops—laid off 866, recalled 311.

'SOS' on Beach Of Bahaman Isle Proves Illusion

Miami, Fla., Feb. 1 (U.P.).—An aerial search of a tiny Bahaman island today revealed that nature apparently played an optical trick in spelling out an SOS message in the sand.

Planes from Nassau and a Navy plane from Guantaamo Bay, Cuba, flew over Plana Cay, about 475 miles southeast of here, to investigate an apparent distress message sighted by two airplane pilots yesterday.

The search craft reported here that sand and weeds filling in old trenches apparently created the illusion of a distress message.

CIO and AFL Urge 75-Cent Pay Minimum

By the United Press

The CIO and AFL yesterday called for a 75-cent hourly national minimum wage to protect unorganized workers and "fair-minded employers" who can't pay decent wages because of competition.

Their views were given to the House Labor Committee, which is considering a bill to increase the wage from 40 to 75 cents. It would authorize an industry committee to raise that to $1 in specific cases.

Walter Mason, AFL legislative representative, called the present wage floor "completely inadequate."

"The workers who will benefit from an increase are the unorganized workers," he said. "They are poorly paid, not necessarily because their productivity is low but simply because their bargaining power is weak."

Solomon Barkin, chairman of the CIO wage-hour committee, said the 75-cent figure is "a realistic wage floor to which no employer can truly object if he wants to pay his workers a wage which represents some modicum of decency."

U. S. Seen Ready To Quit Tsingtao

Tsingtao, China, Feb. 1 (U.P.)—Communist troops stepped up their war of nerves against this big American naval base today, lobbing an occasional mortar shell toward the airport, and there were growing signs that American forces are planning an early withdrawal.

The mortar shells dropped within one mile of the airport used by American military planes. The shelling was believed to be part of a "nuisance campaign." It is known that the Communists have enough strength in the hills to move in against Tsingtao when they wish, just as they did at Tientsin and Peiping.

Installations Dismantled

United States Navy transports berthed here were beehives of activity. Wharves alongside the ships were cluttered with packing crates, jeeps and trucks which were being prepared for loading. Marine and naval communications installations have been dismantled.

Dispatches from Nanking said the Communists had mustered some 500 boats in Kaoyu Lake, apparently for an amphibious assault on Nanking from the Yangtze River. Kaoyu Lake is about 35 miles north of the Yangtze and it runs into Drang Canal which runs into the Yangtze.

No progress was reported in Nationalist efforts to negotiate for peace. However, the Communist radio said Acting President Li Tsung-jen was only maintaining a "front" of peaceful intentions while Nationalist generals prepared for more war.

Li Back In Nanking

The Nationalists have appointed their peace negotiators, but the Communists have not. Some observers believe the Communists are stalling in the hope of taking over other cities with separate peace agreements, as they did at Peiping.

Li was back in Nanking after a cabinet meeting yesterday in Shanghai. Authoritative sources said he had ordered Premier Sun Fo to bring the cabinet back to Nanking in an effort to check Communist charges that the government is "fleeing to Shanghai and Canton."

The government is scheduled to begin operating from Canton February 5, but informed sources said the cabinet might hold only a token meeting there, and then be returned to Nanking. A source close to Li said he "definitely" would not leave Nanking.

Woman Surplus

Share-Spouse Drive Waged In Germany

Hamburg, Germany, Feb. 1 (AP).—A twice-married schoolteacher of 52 is waging a determined share-the-husband campaign.

The teacher, Mrs. Dorothea Klaje of Kiel, wants the law under the projected west German constitution to permit surplus German women to bear children by temporary husbands.

In broadcasts and interviews Mrs. Klaje is pointing out that some seven million German women now have no hope of getting husbands because the war has caused a shortage of men. She wants permission for such women to marry temporarily for specified lengths of time so they might bear children to "save our culture."

Mrs. Klaje, herself childless, said her aim is to make the German mother the center of family life.

Under her plan, the women would inherit both property and and hand the names down through daughters rather than sons. Eldest daughters, rather than sons, would inherit both property and family name.

Fathers, she says, "are unimportant in marriage."

Clay to Stay As Zone Chief, Draper Says

Undersecretary of the Army William H. Draper made it plain in a statement yesterday that no change is now in sight in the duties of Gen. Lucius D. Clay as Military Governor of the American zone in Germany. Draper is acting head of the department while Secretary Royall is on a trip to the Orient.

Royall, it was learned last Saturday, has written President Truman urging that the administration in Germany be turned over to the State Department. But neither the Army nor the State Department wants to rush through any quick change in Germany, the focal point of the cold war between the Eastern and Western powers.

The statement issued by the Army yesterday said:

"In response to press inquiries, Acting Secretary Draper today made it clear that no change in the responsibilities exercised by General Clay as United States Military Governor in Germany is contemplated at this time or at any early date.

"Secretary Draper pointed out that the Army has consistently favored turning over our governmental operations in Germany to a civilian agency and that the Army still favors this transfer at an appropriate time. However, no governmental decision has been made to effect any such transfer.

"Mr. Draper emphasized that if such a decision is made at some time in the future, a period of time would necessarily elapse before the changeover could be effected. General Clay's important responsibilities and duties as Military Governor in Germany continue unchanged, Mr. Draper added."

Mayor Urges 3 Changes in Berlin Setup

Berlin, Feb. 1 (U.P.)—Mayor Ernst Reuter of western Berlin proposed today that the three western sectors of this capital be incorporated into the proposed west German state.

Reuter suggested also, during a meeting of the City Assembly, that the Western Allied mark be accepted as the sole currency for western Berlin, and that the Anglo-American airlift be increased.

His proposals were announced while German political leaders were meeting at Bonn in an effort to draft a suitable constitution for a west German government.

Unless the airlift is increased, Reuter said, and western Berlin is returned to a near-normal economic position, there will be a great increase in unemployment.

Jets' Exhaust Used To de-Ice Airlift Wings

Officials of the Military Air Transport Service disclosed today that jet propulsion is playing an important role in the Berlin airlift—by de-icing the wings of the piston-engined Douglas C-54 transports that supply the blockaded German capital with food and fuel.

They credited two resourceful sergeants of the Thirty-sixth Fighter Group, Ralph Hollis of Sweetwater, Tex., and Lan S. Fisher of Hialeah, Fla., with figuring out that the hot exhaust gases from the engine of a Lockheed F-80 jet fighter would be ideal in clearing frost and freezing rain from the wings of the parked transports. Such an engine, mounted on a conventional engine stand, was rigged up at the Furstenfeldbruck Air Force Base in the back of a truck so that the exhaust blast could be directed at the proper angle to sweep the chilly wings of the C-54s.

Kremlin Aide On Rhine Gets Jail for Speech

Duesseldorf, Germany, Feb. 1 (AP).—Max Reimann, the Kremlin's chief watchman on the Rhine, was sentenced today to three months in jail for an inflammatory speech delivered once too often.

It was a speech in which he said German politicians who cooperate with the Western Allies, particularly in setting up an international authority for the Ruhr, are quislings who will have to account to the German people.

Reimann got away with the declaration in the United States zone, but was arrested on a charge of violating Allied regulations when he repeated it before 5000 Germans in the British zone January 2.

Harassed by Communist demonstrations, a British military court convicted him today of attempting to inflame the German people against fellow Germans cooperating with the Western Allies.

About 100 of his followers staged a parade with the theme "Free Max Riemann." Spokesmen of the party, although it has only 100,000 card holders in west Germany's population of 46 million, hinted at strikes.

Citizen Thomas Chu Lee . . .

The Washington Post

YOUNG AMERICAN—Thomas Chu Lee, 9, of 1420 Euclid st. nw., who became an American citizen yesterday, has a hankering for cowboy hats

Nine-year-old Thomas Chu Lee, for whom the best feature of this country is the wild and woolly West, was sworn in yesterday in District Court as an American citizen.

He was among 31 persons to take the oath before Judge David A. Pine in District Court.

Thomas, who resides at 1420 Euclid st. nw., said he wants to be a cowboy. He learned about them from a movie he saw in his native Hongkong. Thomas came over to this country a year ago with his father, who is a naturalized citizen and an employe of the Lotus Restaurant.

The boy, who still has to get one of his front teeth, also confessed a liking for another great American feature—bubble gum. He is a second grade student at Cooke School, has learned English since coming here but stumbled over some of the multisyllable words in the oath of allegiance.

Others naturalized were:

Louis Nakis, 1416 R st. nw., Turkish; Ernest Di Sandro, 66 New York ave. nw., Italian; Carlos O. 4 Ex-Citizens at Libel Trial Tell of Soviet Camp Torture

Paris, Feb. 1 (AP).—Four former Russian citizens testified today that they were beaten, tortured and shut up in concentration camps in the Soviet Union.

On the basis of their experiences, they said, they could say under oath that Victor Kravchenko's book, "I Chose Freedom," tells the truth about life in Russia.

"Kravchenko's book exactly reflects life in Soviet Russia," said Gabriel Kysilo, a former Russian engineer. He said communism rules "by hunger, agitation and terror."

The witnesses were testifying in the trial of a libel suit brought by Kravchenko against a French Communist weekly paper, which published declarations that the book is untrue.

Kysilo yesterday told of being arrested and imprisoned on false charges of being a saboteur. He told today of being shut up for three months in a cell that was built for 24 persons, but contained 136.

Ivan Krevsoun, 57, told of being transported to prison in Siberia in a locked freight car. The trip to Vladivostok took 33 days and nights, he said.

"There 40 per cent of the prisoners died of hunger," he said. "Sometimes it was 65 degrees below zero."

A former Red army soldier, Lev Silienko, 28, testified he had been afraid to return to Russia because he had been taken prisoner by the Germans.

"Stalin had said there were no Russian prisoners of war, that those taken were traitors," he said.

Fulton Lewis, Jr., Beats $100,000 Damage Suit

Judge Matthew F. McGuire of District Court yesterday dismissed a milicious prosecution suit for $100,000 brought against Fulton Lewis, jr., the radio commentator. The plaintiff was Mrs. Agnes C. Pearson, 48, of 4408 Volta pl. nw. She was arrested in September, 1947, and then acquitted on a charge of assault on Lewis' daughter, Alice Elizabeth, then 15 years of age. Judge McGuire ruled that Lewis had probable cause to file a complaint.

Soviet to Push Cosmic Ray, Atom Studies

Moscow, Feb. 1 (U.P.)—A leading Soviet scientist announced today that Russia this year plans to speed up atomic research, cosmic ray studies and other "physico-mathematical" experimentation.

Sergei Vavilov, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said also that Russia plans to publish a history of philosophy, "unmasking . . . neofascism in western European and American science."

At the same time, the Soviet cabinet ordered early action on a 25-year "facelifting" plan for Moscow, aimed at transforming this city into one of the most beautiful capitals in Europe.

Planners were given until October to blueprint the rebuilding program along lines to be laid down by the local Communist Party convention that opened here today.

Vavilov announced that Russian research programs in various scientific fields will be expanded during 1949, and added:

"In the field of physico-mathematical science, it must be noted that characteristic problems for 1949 are problems concerning the atomic nucleus, cosmic rays, optical methods, analysis of methods of weather forecasting and the study of earthquakes."

The beautification plan would pick up the work begun by a previous 10-year plan, whose masterpiece was the city's famous marble-walled subway.

Hungary Put On 'People's Republic' Roll

Budapest, Feb. 1 (AP).—The Republic of Hungary became a "people's republic" today.

(The change gives Communist Hungary the actual form of other people's republics—Poland, for example—which are satellites of Soviet Russia. Hungary has had practically everything but the formal name for a long time. Presumably the change removed the last obstacle to full-fledged treaties with other countries in the Soviet sphere.)

A formal statement accompanying proclamation of the change said "American imperialists and their satellites now replace German Fascists" as enemies of people's democracies.

"Hungary aims to maintain friendly economic and political connections with all countries, provided they do not interfere with our internal affairs," the statement added.

It promised "absolute freedom of religion," but announced Hungary would fight back "if the church uses her international connections to support internal and external enemies of the people's democracy."

The statement came three days before the scheduled start of the trial of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, Roman Catholic primate of Hungary. The government charges him with treason and other offenses.

Atomic Facts May Be Aired at Joint Hearing

By the United Press

An official compaign to give the public more facts about the secrecy-shrouded atomic energy program will get under way today.

The Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee will open public hearings with Chairman David E. Lilienthal and members of the Atomic Commission as witnesses.

Committee Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) said the hearings would cover "America's atomic policy."

While he would not go into detail, McMahon is known to feel that too much atomic secrecy may hurt United States security rather than help it.

He said in Detroit Monday night that a "disastrous war" might be averted if this country would tell the world how many atomic bombs it had stockpiled. He also has voiced the view that Congress is legislating in the dark when it votes billions for a defense program without knowing anything about the Nation's most powerful defense weapon.

Meanwhile, speaking at Denver, Colo., Atomic Energy Commissioner Sumner T. Pike told Colorado miners last night he hopes they soon will be riding around in gold-plated limousines "to be greeted as the new kings of uranium."

In an address to the annual meeting of the Colorado Mining Association, Pike described incentive payments which the commission is offering to encourage prospecting for domestic "strikes" of the vital atomic ore.

He said this country is still mainly dependent on foreign uranium and gets only "a discouragingly small proportion from domestic mines.

"We continue to hope for more and larger discoveries," he said. "A uranium discovery comparable to the copper deposit in Bingham Canyon . . . would not only be immensely important to the Nation but tremendously profitable to the owners.

"Possibly there is no such thing in this country. However, with less than a decade of search behind us, it is far too early to cry quits. If such deposits are available we look to you miners to find them out."

He foresaw a possible "major rearrangement in the economic values of various metals." He said "we hope that many pitchblende deposits will be discovered and we will not question the right of the miner to his profits, however large."

Rev. Dr. Coffin to Speak

The Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, former moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., will speak at a missionary rally tonight at 7:45 o'clock at Central Presbyterian Church, 15th and Irving sts. nw.

Guard Sees 'Trick' In Pentagon Bill

National Guard leaders charged yesterday that a "sleeper" in legislation drafted at the Pentagon setting the strength of the Army and Air Force would permit transfer of the Air National Guard from State to Federal control.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the the House Armed Services Committee, said he doubted if the challenged language was "intentional" on the part of Air Force leaders. But he declared that the bill probably will be amended to make sure it will not authorize Federalization of the Guard.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord of Baltimore, legislative chief of the National Guard Association, raised the question during a hearing before the committee on the so-called Army-Air Force "composition" bill.

He pointed to the omission of any mention of the Air National Guard in pertinent sections setting the strength of reserve components, and declared "it is hard for me to believe" it was an error.

"In my opinion, the people in the Pentagon Building are too smart to make what at first appears to be a number of mistakes," Reckord stated. "I think they have been deliberately drawn to place in the hands of the Secretary of the Air Force all authority to do as he pleases."

Defense Secretary James Forrestal disclosed more than a month ago that he was proposing legislation to merge the Air Guard and the Air Reserve into one force under Federal control. He indicated that President Truman approved the plan.

Guard leaders are violently opposed, though a minority headed by Col. Thomas G. Lanphier, jr., chief of the Idaho Air National Guard, back Forrestal. Lanphier declared recently "we have 48 air forces too many."

Vinson did not indicate his views on the Air Guard issue yesterday, but made it plain it would not be a part of the present legislation.

Lofton S. Wesley Made Restaurant Association Head

Lofton S. Wesley of Sandy Spring, Md., has been elected president of the Washington Restaurant Association.

Wesley

Coowner and manager of Wesley Hall, a combination rooming and boarding house, 1426 21st st. nw., Wesley was first vice president of the association in 1948.

Active in District business affairs since 1926, he is vice president of the Washington Harvard Club and was president for two years of the Washington Harvard Business Club. He also is a member of the board of trustees of the Barney Neighborhood Settlement House and vice chairman of the education committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

Elected vice presidents were Edward M. Warner, owner of the Tastee Diners and Alfred M. McGarraghy, owner of Sholl's Cafeteria, 514 14th st. nw. Treasurer is John S. McDaniels, of the Hot Shoppes, Inc.

curity treaty, the department disclosed.

"We hope to be in a position soon to discuss the whole (North Atlantic security) subject not only with Norway but also with other governments," Press Officer Michael J. McDermott told a news conference.

The American Government's position was made known about the same time that the Norwegian government was politely, but firmly, turning aside a Russian note objecting to the pact.

State Department officials withheld any formal comment on the Norwegian note, but official informants have long said privately that the Scandinavian countries belong as much in the Atlantic community as any of the member nations.

On another angle of East-West relations, some authorities here suggested that the United States, either alone or in cooperation with other Western powers, soon might make a statement on Premier Stalin's weekend comment that he would have no objection to working out a "peace" declaration with President Truman.

These developments followed swiftly the United States announcement yesterday that it was granting full diplomatic recognition to Israel and Trans-Jordan. American emissaries gave both governments official notice of recognition today.

Bergson, Merlin Soon To Leave for Israel

Peter Bergson and Samuel Merlin, former chairmen of the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation who have just been elected to the Constituent Assembly of the State of Israel, plan to leave soon for Tel Aviv for the opening session of the Parliament, they said here yesterday.

Exiled from Palestine during the British occupation, they were the only two members elected in absentia.

Congress Urged To Lift Bars

Refugee Organization (IRO) have agreed to accept limited numbers, he said:

The present DP Act, which went into effect last July 1, provides for admission of 205,000 persons over two years. It contained numerous restrictions on eligibility. The commission proposed three changes.

1. Make DPs eligible who became refugees before April 21, 1947, instead of the present December 22, 1945 deadline. This alone would add more than 100,000 persons now barred, Carusi estimated.

2. Wipe out the present requirement that 40 per cent of those accepted come from areas annexed from Germany; also the provision giving preference up to 30 per cent of the total to farmers.

3. Change the present requirement that every applicant must have specific assurances of jobs and housing; also, eliminate priority for refugees living in camps.

Fund for Loans Asked

4. Create a revolving fund for loans to voluntary agencies to help pay refugees' transportation from American ports to new homes.

5. Provide for admission of recent political refugees, if deemed in the national interest.

6. Bar admission of individuals such as Nazis who advocated or assisted in persecutions.

The commission contended that the present 1945 deadline penalizes several groups, especially Jews who fled from Poland and other eastern European countries into Germany and Austria in 1946 and early 1947. The commission said that of an incomplete total of 95,000 thus barred, 78,000 are Jewish, and most of the rest are Catholic.

District Student Named Editor of Yale Law Journal

Frank M. Wozencraft, whose parents, Col. and Mrs. Frank W. Wozencraft, live at 2029 Connecticut ave. nw., has been named editor-in-chief of the Yale Law Journal for the spring term, beginning March 1.

Wozencraft

Wozencraft, a summa cum laude graduate of Williams College, succeeds another Washingtonian, Bayless A. Manning, in the Yale Law School editorial post.

Wozencraft who served three years in the Army, emerging as a captain after 15 months overseas service, was graduated from Williams in 1946.

mended. After the Czechoslovakian coup and the Berlin crisis, he asked the Joint Chiefs of Staff to survey our military position and recommend what we'd need in an emergency.

A "rough compilation" of these needs totaled 30 billions, but the actual 1950 money estimates submitted to the Bureau of the Budget by the Joint Chiefs totaled 16.9 billions. They were cut to 14.4 billions by President Truman.

To make unification more effective, legislation is needed to strengthen and clarify his authority and create a head of the Joint Chiefs, Forrestal said. This official must be a military man and can be called a chief of staff or a chairman, but must be someone to whom the Secretary of Defense can look for military evaluation and military judgment. He should not have the power of making military decision, but should be able to secure such decisions or report a disagreement to the Secretary with a recommendation.

Defending the progress of unification to date, Forrestal said that true unity can come only by evolution. Sudden, arbitrary action would be "dangerously unwise," he said, as readiness of armed forces can be damaged by hasty reorganization.

His comments on other points:

Did he contribute to the Dewey campaign or communicate with Dewey during that period? Answer: No! He's been a Democrat for 25 years and voted for Mr. Truman. Pressure of his work prevented him from campaigning.

How long will he stay as Secretary of Defense? Answer: As long as he can be of service.

Can the Air Force carry on sustained strategic bombing from bases in continental United States? Answer: The Air Force believes it can when planes now in procurement and on the drawing board are in service. Signs point that way; only a bold man would say it can't be done.

Don't discount new weapons like the super aircraft carrier or the B-36 bomber. No full answer yet exists on the future of air power. Aerial refueling of bombers "can be" a revolutionary step in warfare.

Transfer of tactical aviation from the Air Force to the Army would be a "backward step."

Bill to Operate Freedom Train 2 Years Approved

A bill authorizing the Government to spend up to 2.5 million dollars to operate the Freedom Train for the next two years was approved unanimously yesterday by the Senate Committee on Postoffice and Civil Service.

Committee Chairman Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) said committee approval of the bill was unanimous. The action sends the measure to the Senate floor. Similar legislation is slated for discussion by the House Committee on Postoffice and Civil Service in an executive session Thursday.

The bill directs the archivist of the United States to acquire and operate the Freedom Train until July, 1951.

GI Pensions Opposed by Administration

The Truman Administration yesterday registered its opposition to a veterans' pension proposal which would cost the American taxpayers several billion dollars a year.

Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., told the House Veterans Committee that President Truman's Budget Bureau disapproved the measure which would give servicemen of World War I and World War II a $60 a month pension when they reach the age of 60.

The bill, introduced by Chairman John Rankin (D., Miss.), would qualify for a pension all veterans who have served 90 days in either of the two wars. At the age of 65 the pension would be $90.

More for Disabilities

Extra disability compensation, not limited to service-connected disability cases, would range from $20 to $120 a month.

Gray said that in his own capacity as Veterans Administrator he was neither opposing nor favoring the proposal, but he said the cost of the Rankin bill might be "sufficiently great" to endanger the entire veterans compensation program.

During the first year of operation, Gray said, the bill would give pensions to 2,661,800 veterans at a cost of $1,839,008,000, without considering the cost of the extra disability payments.

Eight Million By 1985

But by 1985, he said, more than eight million World War II veterans will be 60 or older and the cost will be in proportion.

The ultimate cost, Gray pointed out, could not be figured because the costs of the disability demands were uncertain.

Gray said the Rankin measure is contrary to the Administration program and departs from legislative policy previously established by Congress on two counts.

Papers Show Steps to End Slavery

A special exhibit of original documents, each marking a step toward the abolition of slavery in 1865, was opened yesterday at the Library of Congress in honor of National Freedom Day.

February 1 was designated National Freedom Day by President Truman this year for the first time, commemorating the date in 1865 when President Lincoln signed the original congressional resolution that resulted in the Thirteenth (Antislavery) Amendment.

About persons, most of them Negro students and teachers from District public schools, gathered in the Congressional Library's main exhibit hall yesterday for the opening ceremonies. Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, and guest speaker, termed the Thirteenth Amendment "the basis for our present freedom in matters like politics, labor and education.." He said the anti-slavery amendment "set free American labor, and laid down a basis for free work for democratic living."

The Congressional Library exhibit, to be on view for about 3 weeks, includes a recently acquired copy of the Thirteenth Amendment, signed by President Lincoln and all the Senators and Representatives who voted for its original passage.

To Lecture at Boston U.

Miss Veryl Schult, head of the mathematics department of the white District public schools, will lecture at Boston University February 23 on "Appealing materials in mathematics for grades 9 through 12."

Impressed by "the amount of opportunity the United States gives its youth," 34 high school students from the 17 Marshall Plan countries in Europe arrived here last night on an aerial tour of several cities.

The "ambassadors," mostly 16 and 17 years old, are here for a three-day close-up of the Nation's Capital after more than a month of viewing American educational, industrial and cultural life in New York and six other cities across the country.

Their Washington visit sponsored jointly by the Civic Education Association and The Washington Post, the 17 boys and 17 girls are spending two nights at the New Colonial Hotel, 1156 15th st. nw., and on Thursday and Friday nights will stay at the homes of Washington high school students to see at first hand the home life of their opposite numbers here

All speaking English, the students came to America as winners of an essay contest of the New York Herald Tribune High School Forum.

Their schedule here today includes an 11 a. m. conference for high school editors, a Washington Post luncheon with some national celebrities in the family dining room at the Capitol, a tour of the Capitol and Supreme Court Building, visit to the Senate and House of Representatives and a 6:30 Civic Education Association dinner and Marshall Plan discussion at the New Colonial.

On Thursday they hope to meet President Truman and will visit the Library of Congress, lunch at The Old Club in Alexandria and see the National Gallery of Art. Their Friday program is being arranged by several high schools with assemblies and attendance at classes with their student hosts. Friday will include visits to embassies. On Saturday they leave for New York after a visit to The Washington Post.

Dark-eyed, 17-year-old Rosemary Nugent, daughter of a Dublin, Ireland, traveling salesman, spoke for many of her companions on their arrival here in three Army C-47s at National Airport last night when she said:

"We've been deeply impressed by the great kindliness and warmth of the people of America and by the great development of this country, and also by the way we 34 students of 17 different nationalities have been able to live together so happily without the slightest quarrel among us. We've been treated so well wherever we've gone we all want to come back.

"What strikes me most is the almost unlimited amount of opportunity there is for youth in America. It's not the country's fault if they fail to get on. I think we have more advanced academic courses in our high schools at home than you have here, but that is probably because we are compelled to go to school there only until we are 14, whereas here it is usually 17, and at home we have to pay for our high school education and we probably value it more highly and perhaps get more out of it for that reason."

Attorney General Agrees To Meet With Probe Group

Attorney General Tom C. Clark yesterday agreed to meet with the reorganized House Un-American Activities Committee as the House group moved to drop its long feud with the Justice Department.

Following a conference with Clark, Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), chairman of a three-man liaison subcommittee, said the Attorney General will appear before the full committee, probably in executive session, at any time the committee suggests.

Just Case of Cooperation

Walters called it "just a case of cooperation in a number of matters we are mutually interested in."

Walters, first of four lawyer-members added to the spy-hunting group by the Democratic leadership, said the committee may set a date for the meeting today.

His liaison unit later will call on heads of Army and Navy intelligence units in an effort to arrange similar conferences with the committee.

During most of last session, the GOP-controlled House spy-hunting group frequently was at loggerheads with the Justice Department, with the feud reaching white heat during the Federal grand jury investigtaion of the Red spy charges of former Communist courier Whittaker Chambers.

Overhauling Practices

Recently the new committee has been overhauling many of the practices and procedures of the old House unit. On Monday, for example, the committee voted unanimously to bar radio, television and photographic equipment from future hearings in order to operate with as little fanfare as possible.

Other members of Walters' liaison subcommittee are Representatives Burr P. Harrison (D., Va.), and Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.).

Prince Georges Chest Council Elects Officers

The Prince Georges County Community Chest Planning Council elected officers for 1949 last night, meeting at council headquarters in Mount Rainier. Edgar F. Czarra, 4215 Van Buren st., University Park, Md., was elected president.

Other new officers include Mrs. Perry Wilkinson, first vice president; Herbert Reichelt, second vice president; Mrs. William Werber, secretary; Lyman Long, chairman budget committee; Dr. Peter J. Lejins, chairman planning council, and Fred Colwell, chairman public relations committee.

Trial Costs Put at $10,000 a Week to Reds

New York, Feb. 1 (U.P.)—Fees for lawyers and other defense trial expenses are costing 11 accused United States Communist leaders $10,000 a week, it was claimed today.

The Daily Worker, newspaper of the Communist Party, revealed the expense figures in an article calling for contributions of $100,000 in the next 15 days.

The article was written by Elizabeth Curley Flynn, only member of the Communist "national board" not indicted for organizing a party which advocates violent overthrow of the Government. She was named to the board after the others were indicted.

The trial itself, meanwhile, crept through a maze of statistics and technical testimony of Prof. Doxey Wilkerson, Negro educator, aimed at proving the unfairness of the Federal jury system here. Judge Harold Medina threw out as irrelevant 14 charts submitted by the defense and urged Wilkerson to stop repeated digressions and "be more succinct to save time."

The tedium of the statistical testimony was somewhat relieved during the afternoon when the defense called to the stand four more members of the grand jury that indicted the Communist leaders last July. Seventeen other members of the grand jury already had been questioned.

One of the men called was a real estate broker. The other three said they were unemployed but had been, respectively, an insurance man, a cottonseed oil broker and a banker.

The last witness, Joseph L. Morris, proved a thorn in the side of defense attorneys when he refused to answer briefly but demanded that he be allowed to elaborate. Asked whether he owned any real estate, Morris succeeded in getting into the record the statement:

"I own one piece of real estate. I own a grave in Mount Carmel Cemetery."

He also insisted on revealing that he is Jewish. The defense contends that Jews, as well as Negroes, the poor and minority groups, are discriminated against in picking juries.

At day's end, the defense prepared to go into "sex discrimination"—its charge that women also are discriminated against in jury picking.

"Well," said Judge Medina, "if we're going into sex discrimination I think we better adjourn until tomorrow."

Spy Probe Jury Calls Sam Carr and His Wife

Rules Group to Vote Today on Filibuster

By The Associated Press

A proposed change in the Senate debate rules to outlaw the filibuster comes before the Senate Rules Committee for a decision today.

Southern Senators who want to retain the tradition of unlimited debate took last-minute swings at the proposal yesterday.

Despite their outspoken criticism, the committee is expected to recommend a resolution which would permit the Senate to close off debate at any time by a two thirds vote of its members. At present the two-thirds rule applies only to debate on a bill, not to arguments on motions and other matters.

Chairman Hayden (D., Ariz.) called a closed door meeting of the Rules Committee for this afternoon (2 p. m. EST) to vote on the proposed change in rules.

Stennis to Offer Substitute

Without much hope of success, Senator Stennis (D., Miss.) was prepared to offer a substitute proposal under which debate could be cut off only by a vote of 86 of the 96 members. The Southern groups claims 20 members.

Senator Olin Johnston (D., S. C.) said that those favoring a rules change are trying to "grease the skids" for passage of a civil rights program. He declared they were acting without regard to "the drastic social effects" such legislation would have on the South.

Senator Hill (D., Ala.) observed "We've won two world wars and a war against depression with free debate."

Assailed by Long

Senator Long (D., La.) a first-termer, said that any antifilibuster resolution would destroy a Senator's right to be heard. He said the Senate cannot destroy a rule and then depend upon tradition that every Senator has a right to be heard.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said free debate is needed on the Senate floor to offset "propaganda."

"That propaganda doesn't come from Bug Tussle on Forked Creek," he declared. "It comes from big outfits who are fighting for their own interests."

Speed-Up Set On Labor Bill

more than an hour, said he himself had reached the conclusion that Congress must find "some middle ground between the Tobin bill and the Taft-Hartley Act."

Morse said he thought there should be "some final steps in there" to meet a possible national paralysis strike after the Administration's proposed 30-day cooling-off period had run its course without producing labor peace.

"I am inclined to agree with you that we ought to try to do this job without the injunction," Morse told Ching. "I am far from convinced it is impossible to do it without an injunction."

Chairman Thomas later told newsmen he thought it unlikely Attorney General Tom Clark will answer the still unanswered question of whether the President could step in to end a strike after the 30-day period. He said he thought it doubtful Clark would answer that because it deals with "presidential discretion."

Clark has been invited to file a written statement with the committee.

"The President has tremendous rights of discretion," Thomas said. "George Washington had no specific authority to end the whisky rebellion, but he did it, and since then we've paid taxes."

Defending the independent status of his own agency, Ching said it would be difficult if not impossible to do an "impartial" job of mediating if his agency is placed under the Labor Department. Rightly or wrongly, he said businessmen would suspect the conciliators of favoring labor unions, while labor unions might appeal his decisions to Labor Department heads.

Senator Paul H. Douglas, (D., Ill.) asked if his agency could be put under the department for "housekeeping purposes."

"A housekeeper who controls your budget and controls your personnel, controls your service," replied Ching.

Later he said much remains to be done to make the conciliation service the effective instrument he set out to make it.

"Whether I finish it, or someone else does, is not a burning public question," he said. "It is important, however, that the progress made be not lost, that the job be completed, and that the mediators . . . occupy a position . . . that will immunize them from the slightest suspicion that they favor any interest other than that of the whole people."

Harris Named For Chaplain Of Senate

DR. FREDERICK B. HARRIS
Chosen chaplain

Senate Democrats yesterday named the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw., to serve as chaplain of the Senate.

Nomination of Dr. Harris, who held the post from 1942 to 1947, was unanimously approved by the Democratic conference, Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) announced. He was nominated by Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.). Formal approval of the appointment must be given by the Senate when it meets on Thursday, but no opposition is expected.

Succeeds Dr. Marshall

Dr. Harris succeeds the late Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, who died last Tuesday. Since Dr. Marshall's death, Senate prayers have been given by the Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and the Rev. Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor of Gunton-Temple Presbyterian Church.

First elected chaplain of the Senate in 1942, Dr. Harris succeeded the late Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, former dean of the Washington Cathedral. Two years ago Dr. Marshall was named to the post by the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress. The chaplain is paid $2520 annually.

Born In England

Dr. Harris, son of a clergyman, was born in England 65 years ago and came to the United States while young. He was educated at Pennington Seminary, Dickinson College and Drew Theological Seminary, and was ordained in 1912.

Before coming to Foundry Church in 1924, he led pastorates in New Jersey and New York City. He will observe his twenty-fifth anniversary at Foundry Church in November.

Dr. Harris has been an exchange minister in England and at the American Church in Paris. He is a former president of the Washington Federation of Churches and of the Washington Ministerial Union.

Dr. and Mrs. Harris live at 2800 36th st. nw.

Airport Traffic Shows Increase

Statistics showing a marked increase in air traffic at Washington National Airport for December, 1948, over December, 1947, were released yesterday by the Civil Aeronautics Administration in its monthly report.

Total passengers arriving and departing during the month increased from 87,641 in 1947, to 94,652 in 1948.

Scheduled aircraft arrivals and departures were up from 8015 in December, 1947, to9884 in December, 1948. Other aircraft traffic, both civil and military, increased from 3093 in the last month of 1947 to 3539 in the same period in 1948.

Airport officials said bad weather around the Christmas holidays in 1947 and relatively fine flying weather in 1948 explained the increase, which they termed "back to normal."

Senators Ask More Time to Settle Budget

A two-month postponement of the legal deadline for setting a legislative ceiling on Government spending appeared likely last night.

Senate Democrats decided yesterday they couldn't meet the February deadline for recommending a legislative budget, and asked chairmen of House-Senate taxing committees to fix a new one.

April 15 may be the compromise date, but Democratic leaders said postponement suggestions ranged from April 1 to May 1.

The Congressional Reorganization Act requires Congress to estimate by February 15 of each year how much it is going to cost to run the Government.

The Democrats said they couldn't act that fast and complications developed when House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) recently proposed "suspending" the ceiling requirement altogether this session.

Besides Cannon, the men who will work out a compromise are Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.), Senate Appropriations Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) and House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.).

Record Budget Asked By Governor Bowles

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 1 (AP).—Gov. Chester Bowles today asked a politically divided Legislature to provide him with the highest budget in Connecticut's history, financed in part by a new personal income tax.

He proposed spending $297,900,000 for State services during the biennium beginning July 1, in addition to floating a 60-million-dollar bond issue "to finance a backlog of desperately needed buildings and equipment."

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 1 (AP).—Gov. James H. Duff today called for a $988,196,350 two-year State budget—the largest ever laid before a Pennsylvania General Assembly.

Taylor Heads Board To Study Rail Dispute

President Truman yesterday appointed George W. Taylor of Philadelphia as head of a three-member emergency board to study the dispute between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and western railroads.

Other members of the board are Grady Lewis, Washington, D. C., lawyer, and George E. Osborne, a professor of law at Stanford University.

Under the Railway Labor Act creation of the board barred a strike for 60 days. The board will have 30 days to report its findings.

Dewey Asks For Record N. Y. Budget

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 1 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey asked the New York Legislature today to approve a record-smashing budget of $936,200,000 and to impose added taxes totaling $168,200,000.

He recommended 100 per cent collection of the personal income tax, now collected at 60 per cent of the full rate; a 1-cent a gallon jump in the retail gasoline tax, making it 5 cents; a 1 per cent increase, to 5.5 per cent, in the corporate franchise levy, and a boost in the pari-mutuel tax on harness racing from the current 5 per cent to 6 per cent on daily betting up to $550,000 and 7 per cent thereafter.

The budget provided for $518,000,000 for local assistance, including State aid for education, and $418,200,000 for State purposes. Education would get the largest over-all boost—$100,100,000.

Bill Asks U. S. Loans for Medical Students

A Federal program of medical-education assistance to meet the shortage of doctors was recommended yesterday by Representative George A. Smathers (D., Fla.).

Smathers said he will ask early hearings on his bill creating a five-million-dollar revolving fund in the Treasury to provide loans to undergraduates with high scholarship records to pay their way through medical school.

A companion bill by Smathers would encourage expansion of medical schools by authorizing the Commissioner of Education to make 20 million dollars in expansion loans over a two-year period, starting in 1950.

Doctor Shortages

Smathers said no system of medical insurance, or even hospital expansion, will produce adequate medical care unless Congress does something to overcome the present serious doctor shortages.

Physicians are still being turned out at the 1939-40 rate, he declared, although the population has increased 14 million in the last eight to ten years.

The Florida Democrat has received letters from undergraduates all over the United States who aspire to a medical career, but are unable to finance an education.

Eligibles Described

Under the bill, any person graduating within the highest scholastic 25 per cent of his class from a recognized undergraduate institution could apply for a medical education loan, provided he also was physically fit, and was recommended by the president of his institution.

The loans would cover tuition, incidental expenses, and $75 a month subsistence, but in no case would run to more than $1750 a year for any student. The loans, bearing 2 per cent interest from the date of medical school graduation, would be repaid in monthly installments, starting 10 years after the student completes his course.

Smathers said such a program would be virtually without cost to the Government. He stated that a similar program carried on by the National Youth Administration in 1933-35 eventually paid for itself.

To Expand Schools

Smathers said lending students money to get a medical education won't meet the shortage if there are not medical colleges for them to attend.

His companion bill authorizes 20 million dollars for each of the next three years to assist (1) the expansion of existing public and non-profit medical colleges and (2) the construction of new medical colleges in States and areas where none exist.

Each State would receive an allotment on a population basis. To the extent of such allotment, one-half the costs of construction of new projects or expansion of existing facilities would be paid by the Federal Government.

Buffalo Man Slated To Be U. S. Bar Head

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP).—Philip J. Wickser of Buffalo, N. Y., today was nominated as president of the American Bar Association for 1949-1950 at a caucus of State delegates. Nomination is tantamount to election. The new officers will take office at the next annual celebration at St. Louis, September 5.

Aid to Education, School Health Split

By Mary S. Spargo
Post Reporter

The Senate Committee on Education and Labor yesterday voted to split into two separate bills proposals for Federal aid to help educate and to improve the health of the Nation's school children.

By what Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) described as a "nearly unanimous" voice vote the committee decided to introduce one measure to appropriate 300 million dollars annually to aid the States in educating school children, and to introduce another providing for health aid to all children between 5 and 17 regardless of what school they attend.

A subcommittee consisting of Senators Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), Lister Hill (D., Ala.), Robert Taft (D., Ohio) and Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) was appointed to draft a health measure.

Thomas said the committee planned to introduce both measures at the same time.

The education measure, which leaves it up to the individual States to determine what schools shall receive aid, is virtually the same as that passed by the Senate in the Eightieth Congress. States will be helped by Federal grants to bring their average of school spending up to $55 per year per child.

The committee decided, Thomas told reporters, that the health measure should be so drafted as to extend health aid to all children, 5 to 17, whether they attend public, private or parochial schools.

The amount of health aid to be extended has not yet been determined, Thomas said, but the committee has before it two separate proposals, one calling for an annual expenditure of 25 million in Federal funds and the other calling for an annual expenditure of 35 million in Federal funds.

Truman Discounts Depression

tee of Congress. He said he thought this act was one of the most forward-looking pieces of legislation in the history of the Nation.

"And I think that before any disaster with which we may be faced comes about," he added, "we will be in a position to meet it."

Interested in Planning

Mr. Truman said at the outset that he had been interested in planning ever since he knew what the word meant.

"You know we plan our day's work," he said. "We plan the houses in which we are going to live—if we can afford to build one, and we can't these days. . . . We plan cities now, and towns.

"But when we talk about planning the things we want to do economically, we are charged with being Communists and fellow travelers.

"I think that the difficulty is that instead of the word 'planning,' the people who find fault with us when we talk about planning for economic purposes are thinking about controlled economy, not planned economy. The distinction is different, if you analyze it closely."

He reviewed the various "panics" that have struck the United States, beginning with one that began in 1828, and disclosed a little-known chapter in his own career.

The Panic of 1907

"In 1907 we had a bankers panic, which was one of the funniest ones we ever had in the history of the country. At that time I was working in a bank out in Kansas City. And they had the most difficult time in 1907 that I ever heard of. Nobody understood the cause—the why or the wherefore of it.

"And then, after World War I, in 1921, we had a very difficult situation. I was in that one, too. That was when the businessman got into politics—ran on a platform in my county, a busted merchant against a very able and distinguished banker. And the busted merchant won the election."

He told then of the planning that began after 1932 to head off another depression, and said he thought that to some extent "we are succeeding."

Turning to planning for a more efficient government, he told of the work being done by the commission headed by former President Herbert Hoover. He said that Mr. Hoover was coming forward with "a great program," but went on to say:

"I am sure that when that program is presented to the Congress, we will have all sorts of cries and wails from people who are anxious to have certain pets of their own left in the same position they are in now. I have already had a stack of mail that high about this bureau and that bureau . . . which ought not to be disturbed. And I imagine that unless the people are fully informed . . . we will have the usual result of nothing accomplished."

What He Has to Do

Mr. Truman delighted his audience in talking about his powers.

"You know what those powers are principally?" he asked: "Trying to get people to do what they ought to do without being asked to do it. The President spends most of his time kissing people, first on one cheek and then on the other, in order to get them to do what they ought to do without getting kfssed!"

He said that if the country gets the efficient organization Mr. Hoover is trying to give it, then perhaps it would operate without any persuasion on his part. That, he said, grinning, would give the President more time to do the job he is employed to do.

"He has had a raise in salary and he can work a little harder," Mr. Truman said. "I only work 18 hours a day now. Maybe I can put in 20 now."

In his peroration, he said he was now interested in planning for "the welfare of the world." The United States must now meet the responsibility that was given to it in 1918, but which it refused to assume.

"We must assume it," he said. "We must carry it out. And we will continue just that, I am sure, because is is necessary that we do it or else go back to the ninth century. And we can'tafford to do that."

Geoffrey Crowther, editor of the London Economist, who spoke earlier in the day at a luncheon meeting, said that the nationalization of industries in England had got much more attention than it deserved. He said the nationalization scheme had made very little difference to anybody except stockholders in a particular industry.

Nationalization View

Nationalization, he said, had not brought all the advantages that had been predicted for it, but neither had it brought the disasters that the anti-Socialists had said would surely follow.

Of more significance for economists and planners Crowther said, were the attempts in the last 3½ years to run England as a "planned economy." It would be a mistake, he said, to think that there has been a planned economy in England.

"What we have had in the main," he said, "is unplanned planning, or, if you like, you can say that we have been much more planned against than planned."

Wartime controls had tended to hang on, he said, but consistent economic planning did not begin until about a year ago. Then, in the midst of the fuel crisis, Sir Stafford Crips was made Chancellor of the Exchequer, and thereby came into control of all the financial mechanisms of the state and was able to put together economic and financial policies.

Sir Stafford Cripps and Sir Edward Clowdin, he said, "have worked an economic and a moral miracle in England." Now, he added, the English feel that they are once more in control of their own destiny and are moving in the right way.

Social Study To Be Unified

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 1 (AP).—The University of Michigan today placed two sociological fact-finding groups under a new Institute for Social Research.

Dr. Rensis Likert was named director of the institute to provide a unified administration for the survey research center and the research center for group dynamics.

The survey research center is an agency for determining public opinion and attitudes on a broader and more complex basis than the ordinary commercial public opinion poll. It was established here in 1946.

Assistant Director Angus Campbell will succeed Likert as director of the survey research center.

The center for group dynamics seeks to learn more about the forces that control human behavior in groups and to develop a deeper understanding and permit intelligent management of human problems. It was moved to Ann Arbor from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1948.

Dr. Dorwin Cartwright continues as director of the group dynamics center.

55 Students Stricken by Gas

Chicago, Feb. 1 (U.P.).—More than 55 children were overcome or made ill today when chlorine gas seeped through Kelvyn Park High School.

Fifteen were taken to hospitals, but none was reported in serious condition. The rest were treated in neighboring homes by ambulance crews, fire department rescue squads and private doctors.

Chlorine gas, deadly when inhaled in concentrated doses, is used to purify water in the school swimming pool. The storage tank in the basement toppled, breaking a pipe connection and fumes went through the school in the ventilation system.

When the fire alarm bell rang the 1450 pupils began filing out in orderly fashion but some collapsed in the corridors and were carried out by their schoolmates.

Truman Rates Steaks Equal in Discussion

President Truman decided yesterday that sirlon steaks from St. Joseph, Mo., are as good as the Kansas City brand.

But he didn't say how either measures up to those from his home town, Independence, Mo.

Mr. Truman went to the Capitol for a steak luncheon with the 12 Democratic Congressmen from his home State of Missouri. It grew out of a discussion the President had recently with Representative Phil J. Welch (D., Mo.), on the relative merits of Independence and St. Joseph steaks.

Afterwards Mr. Truman said the St. Joseph steaks were as good as Kansas City steaks.

Murders Depicted At Edwards Trial

Baltimore, Feb. 1 (AP).—A picture of violent death which claimed a young Glen Burnie couple last September took shape in prosecution testimony at Thomas Alexander Edwards' murder trial today.

Relics of the sensational dual slayings—a spent bullet, a revolver shell, a girl's shoe—passed into evidence after Edwards, 22-year-old Anne Arundel County Negro, pleaded innocent.

The victims, John H. Mahlan, 25, and red-haired Mary C. Kline, 18, disappeared on a date September 17. Their bodies were found on the twentieth. Edwards' arrest came almost two months later.

Police officers testified how they found the Glen Burnie postal clerk's automobile in a bean patch near Lipin's Corner the day after the disappearance of the pair.

Photographs of the bullet-riddled machine went into evidence. Toxicologist Henry C. Freimuth discussed the blood stains found in the car.

Dr. Earl C. Royer, assistant medical examiner for Maryland who performer postmortem examinations the day after the bodies were found, told the court Mahlan's death appearently was the instaneous result of a shot into his temple.

But the girl's head showed injuries and fractures other than the bullet path which had caused curiously little bleeding, according to the witness.

Defense Attorneys Ridgely P. Melvin and William J. McWilliams questioned the prosecution witnesses closely on the wounds, and on whether the girl could have been unconscious when the bullet was fired into her head.

A three-judge court, presided over by Judge Robert France, is hearing the case, transplanted here from Anne Arundel County by defense request. Edwards waived jury trial.

Among phototographs introduced were some showing the bodies of the pair where they were found.

The revolver shell, spent bullet, and Miss Kline's left shoe put in evidence, all were found in the car, police officers testified.

The girl's mother, Mrs. John E. Kline, took the stand to tell that she had seen Mary alive at 8:45 p. m. September 17 for the last time, when she was leaving with Mahlan on their weekly date.

Wolford Loses

Dismissal Plea in Army Case Denied

Fort Meade, Md., Feb. 1 (AP).—Capt. Samuel H. Wolford of Clear Springs, Md., lost a motion today to have dismissed charges that he mistreated American soldiers at a prison camp in Germany.

The Army captain's attorney moved for dismissal of the charge of "cruel and inhuman treatment of prisoners" at the outset of Wolford's court-martial.

Wolford's trial is the second of four officers charged with mistreating soldiers at the Army disciplinary stockade in Wurzburg, Germany, in December, 1946, and January, 1947. He was in charge of the solitary confinement and safekeeping cell blocks when three prisoners allegedly suffered frostbite.

One of the three prisoners, Negro Pvt. Joseph Suggs, has testified he lost both feet as a result of frostbite and subsequent gangrene.

Capt. Joel G. Holmes, jr., of Philadelphia, was acquitted in the first court-martial. He had been prison surgeon at Wurzburg.

Capt. Connie V. Southern, defense counsel for Wolford, moved for dismissal of the charges on a legal technicality in the charges.

A lawyer on the eight-man court-martial board dismissed the motion. Other members then asked for a recess for a clarification.

When the hearing resumed, Capt. Robert Fuller, former engineering officer at Wurzburg, took the stand. He reported the heating system broke down several times but that stoves were placed in the cell blocks.

Morse to Speak

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) will speak at the weekly meeting of Washington Lodge No. 15 B.P.O. Elks, at 12:15 p. m. today in the Antlers Room of the Elks' clubhouse, 919 H st. nw. Guy A. Caponetto, exalted ruler of the Elks, will be master of ceremonies.

Pardons Asked For 2 D. C. Men

Cowens in the latter's cab the evening of Sunday, September 5, on a drinking ride that took them from the District into Maryland.

She said she "passed out," then awakened some time later to find her clothes stripped off and Cowens trying to perform an indecent act.

She told the jury that when she protested, the men got in the cab, drove off and left her stranded in the Maryland countryside in the nude.

However, the defense story was that after some drinks, Cowens and Fugitt had driven with Mrs. Johnson to the District where Fugitt's brother and wife joined the party, and then all drove to a tavern in Oxon Hill, Md.

Defense witnesses said everyone in the party except Mrs. Johnson entered the tavern, leaving Mrs. Johnson sleeping in the car. Their testimony was that when they came out of the tavern, Mrs. Johnson was missing from the car and that after an unsuccessful search for her they drove back to the District, arriving home at 11:30 p. m.

However, Bowie said he had questioned two men who told him they heard groans as they left the tavern about 12:30 a. m. and found a woman lying in a drunken condition behind a hedge.

They told Bowie they walked away from her, but before departing saw a car drive up, a man get out, and walk to where the women lay. They said he apparently noticed then they were observing him, for he returned to his car and drove off.

One of the man said he had observed Fugitt and his wife and children and Cowens and the others in the tavern and noticed some commotion among them later. He said they told him they were searching for a woman and had been unable to find her.

He declared the party had left the tavern some time before he and his companion found the woman behind the hedge.

serving with the Nazi army, Haupt said.

"Do you regard yourself as a Jew?" Laughlin asked.

"No, sir."

"What were you regarded as by the Germans?"

"As not Jewish."

"Did you oppose the Nazi Party?"

"I certainly did, as far as possible."

A question by Laughlin as to what specific extent Haupt opposed the Nazis was ruled out as irrelevant.

Questioned about his participation in the propaganda air shows, the witness said he was "forced" against his will to participate, and explained that a concentration camp lay ahead for him and his family had he refused.

The witness explained that the Nazis coordinated all art forms into a propaganda front. "Whether you were playing in classics or playing a flute," Haupt said.

Shortly before completion of his testimony, Haupt donned earphones to listen to a playback of the invasion drama as intercepted and recorded by a Government monitoring station at Silver Hill, Md.

He identified the voice of Evelyn as Miss Gillars' on 38 occasions, while he said he could not identify it 34 other times during the play.

The witness said he returned to this country on "a passport" in 1946. He said he didn't know until that time that his American birth entitled him to claim American citizenship.

Earlier, Houben took the stand to tell how, on instruction of higher-ups, he made minor changes in written messages of United States soldiers before passing them on to announcers, including Miss Gillars, for broadcast. This was one to balk any attempt at code, he said.

Kelley said he would call Schnell to the stand today as a second witness to what the Government claims is an overt act of treason on Miss Gillars' part in participating in the broadcast. The trial will be resumed at 10 a. m.

Attorney Maurice Guervitz, who had been assisting Laughlin, has withdrawn from the case, Laughlin said, because of possible "embarrassment." Guervitz is Jewish.

Cattle Vaccination Teams Are Attacked

Mexico City, Feb. 1 (U.P.).—The joint Mexican-United States commission against the foot and mouth disease announced today that members of one of its vaccination teams were attacked by a group of natives in Temascaltzingo late yesterday afternoon.

Robert L. Proctor, United States livestock inspector of Tucson, Ariz., broke away in the melee and fled into the hills, where he is now being sought.

Montgomery Seeks To Up Debt Limit

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—A bill aimed at raising the bonded debt limit in Montgomery County from 7 to 10 per cent will be introduced by the county's legislative delegation to the General Assembly, it was learned here tonight.

Chairman Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., of the delegation, said the action was requested at a three-hour closed meeting tonight between the delegation and the seven-member county council.

Lifting the debt limit to 10 per cent, if approved, would enable the county government to issue approximately 11 million dollars in bonds this year if it wanted to, according to County Manager I. G. McNayr who attended the meeting.

Raising of the debt limit is necessary, officials say, because of the critical need for new school construction in the county. Under the home rule charter adopted by county voters last fall the bonded debt limit is frozen at 7 per cent of the county's assessable base.

When it assumed office, the council inherited a bonded indebtedness of almost 19 million dollars—which is slightly in excess of the 7-per-cent limit.

Recently, the county board of education estimated 11 million dollars in new school construction bonds should be made available this year.

Additional legislation to be introduced as a result of a request by the council, Lofstrand said, would transfer the collection of garbage and refuse from the Washington and Suburban Sanitary Commission to the county government. Under terms of the bill to be introduced, Lofstrand explained, the transfer would be effected June 30, 1950.

Other bills to be introduced as a result of tonight's meeting, according to Lofstrand, would (1) transfer employes and records of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission to the county government, (2) transfer the county liquor control building in Silver Spring to the county government, and (3) authorize the County Council to hire experts to make a fiscal study of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

Montgomery Council To Reorganize Services

Reorganization of the services at the Bethesda and Silver Spring County Buildings was ordered by the Montgomery County Council at its public meeting in Rockville, Md. The council also voted to establish a tax appeal court to hear protests on assessments.

In ordering the administrative changes, the council followed closely recommendations of the Silver Spring Board of Trade.

The council voted to maintain a suburban administrative office in each of the county buildings staffed by an administrative assistant to the county manager and a clerk, both under supervision of the county manager.

The office of the county engineer will remain in Silver Spring at its present location

Maintenance of records of the front-foot benefit street improvement assessments on suburban property will be moved to the office of the supervisor of assessments in Rockville.

County Manager Irving G. McNayr said Mrs. Eloise Graham for Bethesda and Mrs. Alice Snow for Silver Spring, will be administrative assistants, with Miss Margaret Peter as clerk for Silver Spring. Approximately seven persons will be ousted by the reorganizations. The post of assistant public utility agent, now held by Charles H. Carter, is still under discussion.

they ducked into an inhabited alley called Freedmen's ct.

The alley dwellings have no electricity, so police cruisers drove into Freedmen's ct. and illuminated it with their headlights.

They flushed one suspect in the alley. Police said the man had cuts about his face and said his wife had inflicted them. However, the wife later denied this, police said. Another suspect was picked up on 7th st., north of O st.

Police said the men were both Negroes who were "fairly well dressed." Both appeared to be about 26. One was about 5 feet 9, with dark brown skin and wore a camel's hair coat. The second man, about 5 feet 7, was wearing a gray topcoat.

The lookout broadcast by police added that both of the men would be bareheaded and one would be without his shoes.

Nuttall, according to his wife, Mary, 34, has been a policeman for about five or six years and during that time has served at the Tenth Precinct and more recently in the Second Precinct.

Master Zoning Plan to Get Public Airing

A public hearing on the proposed master zoning plan for Prince Georges County will be held shortly by the county commissioners. The hearing must be advertised for 30 days before it is held.

This step was taken by the commissioners yesterday after Robert M. Watkins, county member of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, urged the zoning plan be placed before the public to "let the people say what they want."

The decision also followed assurance by Watkins that—should the plan be adopted—the commissioners would lose none of their authority over zoning. The county heads have had the plan under study since last August. It was adopted by the MNCPPC last June.

Sorely Needed, He Says

Watkins described the master zoning plan, developed by the MNCPPC after long preparation, as "one of the best that can be put out." It provides 14 zoning classifications in place of the present five. He termed the new classifications "sorely needed."

To a remark by Harry W. McNamee, chairman of the Board of Commissioners, that the zoning plan, if adopted, might infringe on the commissioners' authority over zoning, Watkins said there was no intention to "usurp" their authority. He added that the plan can be amended by the county heads after public hearings on proposed changes.

The hearing will be held at the end of 30 days' advertising, but the commissioners set no starting date for the advertising.

A request by Watkins and Irwin I. Main, chairman of the MNCPPC, that the planning commission be permitted to spend its own funds, $25,000 of which is already earmarked, to erect an office building in Hyattsville, was approved by the commissioners.

Bill Planned to End Sales Tax In Maryland Restaurants

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 1.—Delegate John R. Reeves (R., Montgomery) said today he would introduce soon in the General Assembly a bill exempting from the State sales tax all food sold in restaurants.

Criticizing the present practice of taxing all food consumed in eating places, Reeves said it was the intent of the sales tax bill to exempt "necessities."

"It is necessary for many people to eat in public eating places and it is unfair to tax them," Reeves declared.

He estimated that his proposal, if approved, would cost the State about $800,000 in lost revenues.

A similar measure, already introduced by Delegate Albert Sklar (D., Baltimore) would exempt coal, fuel, wood, kerosene and gas from the sales tax. Fuel oil is already exempt.

A highlight of the day's legislative routine was an assertion that Maryland has become "a dumping ground for jalopies." The statement was made by J. Cavendish Darrell, of the Maryland Auto Trade Association, who appeared before the Senate Finance Committee during a hearing on a bill providing for compulsory semiannual auto inspections.

According to Motor Vehicle Commissioner W. Lee Elgin, who also appeared, 800 of the 2502 persons killed on State highways in the past six years died because of defective cars.

The official declared that Maryland is surrounded by inspection stations and said neighboring States have threatened to stop Maryland cars at the State line if the bill does not become law.

Prince Georges County delegates said they would hold public hearings here at 8 p. m. Wednesday night on the two proposals.

One will be on the subject of parking meters for Hyattsville and the other on a proposed 10-cent fire tax in Riverdale Heights.

Montgomery County delegates also urged county residents interested in a proposed bill which would legalize liquor sales at veterans clubs appear at a public hearing set for Thursday at 7:30 p. m. in the Silver Spring intermediate school on Philadelphia ave.

Montgomery School Bill Introduced

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Legislation reportedly desired by the Montgomery County Board of Education was introduced in the General Assembly today by Senator Edward D. Storm (D.) of Frederick.

Storm's bill would extend condemnation rights for proposed school sites from the present 10-acre limit to 25 acres.

Tuberculosis Now Epidemic in Europe

Aid Is Given Hunt for Pure Amino Acid

One of the Nation's leading vitamin finders was yesterday granted $5000 to probe the digestive tract for pure amino acids.

He is Dr. Elmer V. McCollum, 69, professor emeritus of biochemistry at Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health, in Baltimore.

Dr. McCollum

Dr. McCollum, from previous researches, is already credited with discovering Vitamins A and D and helping to find Vitamins B-1. His techniques are also credited with speeding up extraction of histidine and lysine, two of the six feasibly extractable amino acids.

Announcement of the grant was made yesterday afternoon by Dr Detlev W. Bronk, president of Johns Hopkins University. The fund was set up by the Robert Gould Research Foundation of Cincinnati, Dr. Bronk said.

The fund will enable the eminent biochemist to continue his experiments in the chemistry of nutrition, studying a problem that has stumped chemists for 50 years, the separation in pure form of amino acids from protein digests.

Just as proteins are called the building blocks of the body, so amino acids are termed the building blocks of proteins. Eggs, cheese and lean meats all end up as amino acids in the digestion process. And of the 23 known amino acids, only 6 are extractable in pure form in quantity sufficient for basic research and medical use.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 1 (U.P.). Tuberculosis has reached epidemic proportions in Europe and is killing up to 130 persons a day in some countries—more than six times the tuberculosis death rate in the United States, it was disclosed today.

Dr. Paul Andresen, head of a Danish Red Cross team fighting tuberculosis in Yugoslavia, released figures showing 130 tuberculosis deaths daily in Poland and more than 100 in Yugoslavia.

The daily death toll in Poland, which has a population of approximately 34 million, is almost exactly the same as that of the United States, which has a population of 130 million.

Greece, Austria, Germany, Czechoslovakia and Italy also were listed as countries where the tuberculosis infection rate has reached epidemic proportions. Andresen said the tremendous increase is being caused by the lack of adequate housing, food, and clothing as a result of the war.

Pace Sworn as Chief Of U. S. Budget Bureau

Frank Pace, jr., of Little Rock, Ark., was sworn in yesterday as the new director of the Budget Bureau.

Several members of the President's Cabinet and White House staff attended the ceremonies. Frederick J. Lawton took his oath as assistant budget director at the same time.

Pace was formerly assistant budget director.

Bond Issue To Be Asked For Hospital

The board of construction trustees of the Silver Spring Memorial Hospital Association, Inc., last night voted to ask the Montgomery County council to issue $1,500,000 in bonds for the construction and equipment of a hospital in or near the Silver Spring area.

The proposed legislation will be formally presented to the council at its first legislative session under the charter system in May. The bill calls for amortization of the indebtedness by a tax not exceeding 10 cents on each $100 valuation of assessed property in the Fifth and Thirteenth Election Districts.

This would take in all of Silver Spring, Colesville, Hillandale, White Oaks, Glenmont and other nearby communities in the eastern part of the county.

Ralph D. Boyd, president, said it may not be necessary to issue more than one million dollars in bonds if Federal assistance can be obtained. On the basis of increasing population and property in the area, cost of the project is estimated at $1 per person a year, and probably less than 10 cents in the tax rate.

If the council approves of the measure, it will be "two years before there's a hole in the ground," Boyd said. He explained that it will take a year to sell the bonds and complete plans.

The association owns a large acreage on Forest Glen rd., and Sligo Creek pkwy., for a site. It was purchased by the former board of county commissioners in 1945.

Some Nail Polish Dangerous

An apparently rare but dangerous reaction to nail polish bases can be added to the hazards of the feminine quest for allure, according to a dermatologist at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The danger is to hypersensitive persons allergic to some component of the solutions sold to give longer life to nail polish coatings, reported Dr. Maurice Sullivan, hospital physician and assistant professor of dermatology at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Baltimore.

Dr. Sullivan's finding, based on one case, was published in the Bulletin of Johns Hopkins Hospital, distributed yesterday.

The effects are unsightly, can lead to excruciating pain, and may end in surgical removal of the nails, Dr. Sullivan said. "It is imperative," he said, that physicians be alerted to suspect nail polish bases since the condition "can be confused" with other under-the-nail ailments.

"If the condition remains unrecognized," reported Dr. Sullivan, "the patient is likely to continue the use of the nail base in an effort to cover up the unsightly appearance of the nails and thus further aggravate the condition."

Communist Trial

When the trial of the 11 Communist leaders began in New York more than two weeks ago, we expressed the hope that it would be a coolly judicial examination of the nature of the Communist assault upon our free institutions. Men should not be condemned, we argued, merely because they are Communists. From the first hour of the trial's opening, however, it has been evident that what the defendants are seeking is not justice. They are trying to sabotage our judicial system as they seek to sabotage every other process of democracy.

The first two weeks of the trial were consumed in petty maneuvers on the part of the Communists' lawyers obviously for purposes of obstruction. They called five members of the jury panel and 17 members of the grand jury that returned the indictment in an effort to show discrimination in jury selection. "If you continue to question petit jurors," Judge Medina said in putting an end to this venture, "the system of operating the courts will be literally paralyzed and it seems plain to me the procedure is a futility." When the court met on Monday, the lawyers had wasted so much time that it had to dismiss the January panel of prospective jurors and summon a new panel.

Cut off from this source of obstruction, the Communists' defense found other means of delay. Every trivial matter has become a source of dispute. Judge Medina openly accused the lawyers of "trifling" with him. Incidentally, the judge's life has been threatened through letters received at his home. We have the sorry spectacle of a minority clique which reaps infinite benefits from the American guarantee of fair trials doing its utmost to ridicule the juridical system.

The burden of the complaint that has been raised is that the system of choosing juries brings in a much larger percentage of executives, professional people and clerks than of manual workers. It is desirable, of course, to select jurors without discrimination against any racial, religious, or economic groups, making certain only that men and women of intelligence and responsibility are chosen. But no jury or panel from which juries are chosen could be expected to be a true cross-section of the population. Nor is any such requirement essential to a fair trial. All that an accused person has a right to ask is trial before a jury of responsible persons without deliberate exclusion or discrimination in the selective process.

One must still hope that the 11 Communist leaders will have a fair trial in spite of themselves—that the court will be strong enough and resourceful enough to thwart their antics. But with this kind of a start, heroic efforts will be needed to prevent them from making a farce of it.

Racial Ratios

Senator Russell's "Share the Negroes Bill of 1949" is a measure which, he says, "should strongly appeal to all social-minded people." We are in some doubt as to just what he means by "social-minded people," and the dictionary isn't of much help. Apparently he has in mind some population group that includes himself but not us. For the bill, or rather its transparent motivation, doesn't appeal to us at all.

The Senator from Georgia is most generous—in a way. He would not, of course, think of sharing with the Negroes of the South such civil rights as the vote, equal and unsegregated education and employment and housing, or equal protection of the law. But he wants in "common fairness" to share with all the other States statistically measured portions of the South's Negro population. To accomplish this end he would set up a Federal voluntary racial relocation commission and authorize appropriations to it of four billion dollars over the next 4½ years. The commission would undertake to resettle anyone who wanted to move elsewhere—with proper attention to racial ratios—and see that each one got better housing and a better job in the new spot than he had before.

Senator Russell has tabulated from the last census just how many Negroes might be moved into or out of each of the 48 States to achieve proportionately equal distribution. For some reason he neglected to calculate a figure for the District of Columbia. But since the general idea is that the population of each State should be about 10 per cent Negro, the District would be an emigrant area along with 13 Southern and border States. About two thirds of our Negro citizens would have to elect to depart—and be replaced by incoming whites—if Washington were to conform to the Senator's arithmetical "solution" of the problem of racial equality.

This problem, he says, has "unfairly burdened" the South for the past 83 years. And the unfairness of it, though he would deny this, is measured in his claim that during this period the system of segregation "has been painfully created . . . by people of both races." Painfully, yes; with most of the pain suffered by the Negroes. And excruciatingly painful now, too. For it obviously hurts Senator Russell to think of Negroes enjoying the same rights and privileges he does. It hurts him so much, in fact, that as far as he is concerned the civil rights program will lead directly and simultaneously to racial strife and intermarriage!

Wanted: A Policy

If Stalin's feeler provokes the Administration into expediting the development of a policy on Germany, it will have accomplished a useful purpose. To the outsider, policy at present seems to be drifting with the airlift. Magnificent as this is, demonstration though it be of Anglo-American airpower, the airlift is no substitute for a policy. It has become the shield back of which the Europeans are working out a kind of internationalized Ruhr, the Germans are setting up their western German government at Frankfurt, and the Western states are discussing an Atlantic security pact. The impression is being given that not till these schemes come to some kind of fruition can the general problem of Germany be tackled.

The real solution of the German problem has always been to absorb it in the development of European unity. After the war every western European must have realized that if the prewar system of sovereignty returned the dynamic of a risen if truncated Germany would surely overshadow and frighten any neighboring state. Yet the western Europeans started assiduously and atavistically to cultivate nationalistic roots as soon as the shooting stopped! The activity was called a revival of patriotism, though when the same phenomenon was copied in defeated Germany, in alarm it was dubbed nationalism. A psychological moment had thus been lost in history. It is our feeling that even though national union lay in the German heart, it could have been sublimated by a vigorous espousal of Europeanization outside Germany.

To many people this is now water over the dam; German nationalism is now second only to the Russian threat as the major political factor in Europe. The reeducation of the Germans away from nationalism has made no headway against the example outside, and, indeed, has been a dismal failure, according to our education writer, Mr. Fred M. Hechinger. The final straw is the struggle over Berlin—a struggle which has riveted all German eyes on the place which Bismarck made the capital of a united and aggressive Germany.

The alternative now is to moderate the problem of Germany by influencing its political organization. It used to be said that both a divided and a centralized Germany would insure a third world war. A federal Germany is the least danger—that is to say, a system which while providing for a central government would allow that government only limited powers provided by the constituent states. The prospect of federalism in Germany, however, has been receding. When the western German conference convened at Bonn, there was no occupation statute ready for it; in other words, there was no framework for the Germans to work in, and the German nationalists got carte blanche. Not until two months later, or after the Germans had completed the first draft of their constitution, did the three military governors remind the Germans that they wanted a constitution for a federal state. Since then both the occupation statute and the work at Bonn haven't been heard of, and the news has been concerned with the Russo-Western struggle and negotiations over Berlin.

It has been said several times that on this subject an agreement with the Russians on our stated terms is possible. As to that, our information is merely gossip, but surely the time is approaching when, with the airlift subject to a law of diminishing returns, a settlement must be envisaged. What Stalin now asks is the postponement of western German government in return for the lifting of the blockade. The request has been greeted as something new. Actually the State Department account of the Berlin crisis issued last year shows that on August 2 Ambassador Bedell Smith was told to assure Stalin that "it is certainly not intended that any conclusions that they [the German conferees] reach shall preclude or contravene any agreement arrived at by the four powers on a government for all Germany." This being the case, a rebuff of the Stalin overture would be regarded as an indication that the United States is not interested in anything but drifting along with the present unsatisfactory status quo.

As we say, this will get more unsatisfactory as time goes on, though now we are all inclined to view it with pride. For the time being the Western position in the tug-of-war is strong, and Stalin's feeler is a recognition of Western strength; but it is a position, and not a policy. A policy is necessary for winding up the airlift and the entire situation in Berlin. With it there would be no need to fear a meeting with Stalin, especially if we are prepared in due course to consider a common troop withdrawal to the German frontiers as an element in that policy.

Discordant Records

The estimated 16 million people in this country who like to call their own tunes on their own phonograph records had a good thing before last June. Those were the days when any make or model of phonograph would play any brand of the standard 10-inch or 12-inch disc. But what will probably be called "progress" has busted out all over the recording business, and the result is an unholy mess. The mild gratitude many music lovers felt toward the record companies for making good music available for enjoyment at one's own whim can't last much longer.

The first omen of dissonance came with the introduction last summer of the Columbia "long playing" records. These keep to the familiar sizes, but that's about all. They have a much finer needle groove and turn at 33 1/3 revolutions a minute instead of the standard 78. For the advantage of up to 22 minutes of uninterrupted music on one side of a record, at a saving in cost and storage space of records, that seemed like an agreeable deal. You could get an attachment with a slow turntable and suitable needle arm or replace your old changer with one having two pickups and a two-speed turntable.

Now comes the disillusionment. Beating the RCA Victor people to the draw by one day, Columbia has brought out a 7-inch version of this type of record. These can be played one at a time on the LP attachment, but an evening's concert obviously calls for a totally new record changer. But wait! The RCA version leaves behind all previous styles. It is 6⅞ inches in diameter, it revolves at 45 rpms, and the center hole is 1½ inches across, fitting only an especially-designed player with the changing mechanism in the center post. And the records have still a third width of groove, calling for still a different size and shape needle.

At this point an all-around phonograph must have at least two turntables revolving at three different speeds, three needle arms, and enough changer mechanisms to handle four sizes of record of two different center-hole sizes. And there may be worse yet. None of the other recording companies has yet been heard from. We are thinking of commissioning Rube Goldberg to design for us a phonograph to end all phonographs—unless the record companies succeed in their attempt to end the whole business first.

How Many Bombs?

Senator McMahon has come courageously to grips with the most vexatious problem of public policy respecting atomic energy Should the American people be told, he asks, how large a stockpile of atomic bombs we have and how fast we are producing them? Although he did not reach a definite conclusion in his speech Monday before the Economic Club of Detroit, the public is indebted to him for an intelligent and piercing discussion of the issues.

The burden of Senator McMahon's argument is on the side of frankness. He acknowledges that any disclosure to the American people also would inform the world, including our potential enemies, of our atomic strength. But this would cut two ways. If our supply and production rate of bombs are great, these data would be a convincing testimonial to our power. By the same token they would reassure the American people, many of whom, mystified by the secrecy, are wondering whether we have got any bombs at all. Finally, such data would lend weight to the proposals for international control of atomic energy that no amount of talk or demonstrations could give.

If, on the other hand, the stockpile is small, then that is a fact of immense importance to our own military preparations. It is possible, for example, that because of the cloak of secrecy we are overestimating our own strength. We are, as Senator McMahon says, "like a general who must train his troops without knowing how many rounds of ammunition they will be issued." It is scarcely possible for Congress to legislate intelligently on other aspects of defense without knowing whether the weapon on which we are placing much of our reliance is actually what it is cracked up to be. And no citizen is in a position to appraise the budget without knowledge of the number of atom bombs we have.

What has been building up since is Hiroshima is a secrecy psychosis on atomic energy encompassing many matters not justifiably secret. The unfortunate effect of this psychosis is to make many persons, including legislators, wash their hands of atomic energy as something remote and forbidding. It will also encourage those who think the bomb should be banned like poison gas. Secrecy is a severe deterrent to sensible inquiry and review of our performance on atomic energy. As the new chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, Senator McMahon could help reverse this trend by reinstituting the policy of open hearings that prevailed during the evolution of the McMahon Act. With a revised policy on atomic secrecy, there should be no need for hearings in camera except in a very limited area. A fundamental consideration for the committee and Congress to remember is that the broader the range of secrecy invoked, the greater is the danger of a backfire.

Woman's Friend

More may be heard down the years of Charles Nestle, the 80-year-old inventor of the permanent wave, who recently received a citation from the American Women's Voluntary Services in New York. Some solemn-minded persons were a little shocked to find Mr. Nestle being honored along with Helen Keller and Dr. Sarah Gibson Blanding, president of Vassar College. But, as those who bestowed the honor pointed out, Charles Nestle had "enhanced the appearance and social life of women throughout the world and also had given impetus to the beauty trade, largely operated by women.

There may be arguments from some as to how much Mr. Nestle's invention has enhanced women's appearance. But certainly it has saved them many hours of time "doing up" their hair and has encouraged them in self-confidence and initiative. The growing popularity of the "permanent" around the world even has political connotations. For the first reaching out of women in so-called backward areas to more self-assertive lives is in their efforts to adopt Western "beauty" aids. This in turn stimulates their efforts toward economic independence. The time may indeed come when Mr. Nestle may rank as a social innovator with Eli Whitney, inventor of the cotton gin, to whom he was compared in his citation.

Teaching The 'Facts Of Life'

By Malvina Lindsay

End of Shush-Shush

WHILE Americans are improving in many ways, some of their recent appraisers believe they are slipping in moral standards. Historians and sociologists, as well as preachers, warn of this weakness. They point to the increase of venereal disease, illegitimacy, sex crime, juvenile delinquency, family instability—all of which have been aggravated by the upset of war.

Yet in the long view social hygienists here for the annual meeting of the American Social Hygiene Association are encouraged. At least people are meeting sex problems openly and objectively. The old whispering, back-alley approach which fostered ignorance, misconception and inaction is definitely on the wane.

As recently as 1936, a speech that Dr. Thomas Parran, then Surgeon General of the United States, was broadcasting at a dinner was cut off the air when he used the word "syphilis." But the venereal disease crusade has now been aggressively out in the open for about a decade.

NOT LONG AGO "sex education" was almost a fighting as well as a whispered term. Today parents and teachers are besieging the American Social Hygiene Association, the United States Office of Education and other public agencies to know how they can dispense information in this field. In the last two or three years particularly there has been great popular interest in what the social hygienists insist should be called "education for personal and family living." In most school systems some efforts at such education are made. The widespread showing of the film, Human Growth, to pupils and to Parent-Teacher Associations indicates how greatly attitudes have changed.

Yet the so-called "facts of life" are not yet taught as widely as they need to be. There is still controversy over who should teach them—the idea persisting that they are something that comes in a package, or at least a stern moral lecture. Some insist the imparting of sex information is a job for parents only. Those who see it as a job also for the schools point out that most parents are failing in such teaching, that many of them are unprepared to instruct, and, also handicapped by the secretive and guilty attitudes toward sex their backgrounds have given them.

The attitude of social hygienists generally is that such education should begin in the home, continue in the school and church, and go on through life. It should be a part of the day by day growth of the child. His first questions should be met in the home and his first attitudes formed there. Parents should be educated—or educate themselves—to do this.

AS THE CHILD'S environment expands, school, church and group agencies should continue his training in this field. The modern educational approach is away from the scary, shush-shush method associated with "sex education" classes and lectures. Instead of special courses and segregated classes, the idea now is to include this general human relations education in such courses as biology, home economics, psychology, sociology, health education, athletics and recreation. The development of wholesome attitudes and social responsibility is stressed.

Recently youth itself had a say on the subject through the New York Times Youth Forum. The participants, and the youthful audience as well, generally thought parents were not meeting their responsibilities largely because they were uninformed and "too emotional." These youths thought the home should lead in such teaching, with the schools doing a supplementary job. They wanted their parents to be "more objective" in their approach, their teachers to "know how to explain things."

Social hygienists admit human relations instruction is no magic nostrum to improve moral standards overnight, especially since these have been long influenced by the many complex forces an industrial age has unleashed. But, as they point out, one of the main steps in making man more healthy, socially and morally, is to help him know and understand his physical being.

"Communist Professors"

In your editorial, "Communist Professors," of January 25, you state that "the original investigation was made by a legislative committee, but trustworthy reports from Seattle say there was no witch-hunting." With all due respect for the sources of your information I wish to take strong exception to such an assertion.

I had the opportunity to attend the open hearings conducted this past summer by the (Washington) State legislative committee on subversive activities in Seattle. It was, I assure you, a most unpleasant experience. Witnesses for the committee were allowed practically unlimited time. They engaged in tirades during which Columbia University and General Eisenhower were tainted red and such projects as a future Columbia River Valley Authority and public power in general were implied to be un-American.

The witnesses for the committee spent hours talking. The faculty members under investigation, with one exception, were restricted to answering yes and no to direct questions. Attempts to speak further were usually prevented by energetic and frequent use of the gavel by the chairman.

The same treatment awaited the attorneys for the professors. Those attorneys who insisted on being heard in spite of the chairman's objections were forcibly removed from the courtroom by uniformed State police. There was no opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses.

Action for perjury has been filed against one of the witnesses of the committee. He testified that he saw a certain member of the faculty at a Communist meeting in New York City. The professor has been able to prove his whereabouts during the period concerned. He was not in New York.

It may be said, of course, that the proceedings did reveal the presence of Communists on the faculty of the University of Washington. But since when do we subscribe to the maxim that the end justifies the means? I suspect that the hearings defeated their purpose to a great extent by making martyrs out of the persons accused. The nature of the conduct of the hearings was such that many a fair-minded citizen was inclined to support anyone victimized by its procedures, only to find himself in the ironic position of supporting several Communists.

DP Families

In view of the delay in the displaced persons bill it might be interesting to your readers who have given serious thought to this matter to read a letter from a DP Latvian camp, written by a minister's wife. They are about 40 years old, have two girls aged 11½ and 12½. After years of camp life and heartsick about the fate of their loved ones, they now are much concerned about the future.

"My husband wanted to write you, but he is very busy. He has to register our people who want to emigrate. Many families wish to go, but how many will be let we do not know. This is our greatest hope. Every country to which we can emigrate chooses only the young strong men. Where may stay the helpless? How then can a son leave his old mother, or a mother her child?

"We do not demand that other people care for these our loved ones. We and all families will supply themselves to do this. We ask only to give us the possibly to emigrate all family together, and we will so happily work and care for them. In this first action we cannot see the humanity. Where is the Christianity to leave our beloved ones behind? Our fate is unhappy, but all our difficulties are not comparable with our brothers and parents in our own country."

Communist Victory

Do not let us repeat the treacheries of the Coolidge Administration in regard to the Communists in China, which was a "stooge," not to the Kremlin but to Tory England to keep the antirepublican war lords in power.

If Russia and her Michael Borodin were the sponsors for the republic of Sun Yat Sen, or any other outside influence, especially politically conscious missionaries who preached Christian socialism, so much the better. China has the right of aid from her Von Steubens and Lafayettes the same as the United States in 1776. Chinese Communist armies, especially the sensational 19th route army, won a republic for China. And again in 1936 they won freedom from Japan at the cost of kidnaping Chiang Kai-shek and exacting as "ransom" the promise from the faithless president to join in the war against Japan instead of appeasing her. Radio-Equipped Bus

You might cap this true experience recently as "Transit-radiology."

The time was 7 p. m.; the place the corner of Southern ave. and Bowen rd. se. I was waiting for a bus, one of the two that would get me home to dinner in no less than an hour and a quarter. I was already an hour late leaving my work. My car was home in the garage, where its battery had died a lingering death. I held in my arms a new battery.

Finally the bus pulled up to the curb and I climbed on, setting the cumbersome load down by the driver and sauntered to a vacant seat halfway back in the bus as it growled away from the curb. Then something seemed different . . . strange . . . I sensed that this was no ordinary bus. Music was seeping into my ears from above—smooth, cheer-filling music. Then I broke out of my daze. I forgot all about the hour's delay, my cold dinner, the heavy battery. Here was transit radio. I had to smile, almost laugh out loud. The work I'd just left in such a huff was the broadcasting control room of WBUZ, the station piping the programs into the radio-equipped bus in which I was riding home.

Bishop Oxnam's Charges

In your paper there appears an account of Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam again levelling serious charges against the Roman Catholic Church.

May I assure Bishop Oxnam and others that they have nothing to fear from the Catholic Church. For it is more or less taken for granted, as things stand, that no Catholic, true citizen though he be, can ever become President of the United States; that no Catholic can ever become Secretary of State; that no Catholic can ever become Chief of Staff of the Army or Navy; that no Catholic clergyman can ever become chaplain of the Senate or House of Representatives.

Protestants are in control; but you don't hear Catholics murmuring.

Bishop Oxnam is constantly emphasizing religious freedom. If he intends to create the impression that the Catholic Church will impose its religion upon the American people, then may he and others be reminded that not even Jesus Christ did this.

If Bishop Oxnam is such an ardent defender of religious freedom, why is he so opposed to the freedom of religion of Catholics? If Catholics are supporting our Government and public schools, through taxes, why haven't they the right, in justice, to demand that their children be taught religion in those schools?

JOSEPH E. GEDRA
Washington

Before Bishop Oxnam makes charges that the Catholic "hierarchy" is striving to get political power in this country, he should cast the beam out of his own eye. His position in the Methodist Church is on a level with the position of this "hierarchy" he denounces—yet he blindly holds a huge public demonstration in Constitution Hall in our Nation's Capital aimed at influencing congressional legislation—the same thing he so bitterly accuses the Catholic bishop of doing.

Down to the really small and insignificant controversy that started this wave of hysteria—free bus rides to school and health services for Catholic children—for these many years Catholics have strained to support their church schools (which they believe in), and at the same time have supported the public schools just like other citizens. They do not complain about being taxed to support public schools. They simply say: "Since we do pay taxes to provide free transportation and free health services for public schools, cannot our own children also ride these same buses and have these same services?" MRS. R. D.
Washington

The recent attack on the Catholic Church by Bishop Oxnam impresses me as being a classic example of the shortsightedness often displayed by the human administration of organizations devoted to teaching the principles of Christ. The jointly fundamental motivation for all Christian religions, namely, the propagation of a faith in a Superior Being, an eternal life, and the brotherhood of man, is too often overlooked in vicious bickering over issues of comparative triviality. CYNIC.
Washington.

I am afraid the bishop's remarks are outdated by about 300 years. At the time of the Protestant Reformation the Roman Catholic Church may have been guilty of those accusations, but since that time has had a reformation all its own and today stands out in this darkened world as a fine example of humanitarianism, tolerance, religion and equality. It has fostered education, charity and missionary work throughout the world. I have been going to Catholic churches for about 30 years now and I have yet to hear one priest make a remark against Protestant churches, against religious freedom or for a joint church and state.

Rent Uprising

Anent the uprising of landlords in Tulsa and other areas, it is refreshing to note that one group at least is getting tired of being pushed around and proposes to do something about it. Rising taxes and cost of upkeep far beyond what they were when rents were fixed make property for rental purposes an unprofitable investment.

I know of one property owner who, at no small sacrifice, had built up his holdings through the years but grew weary of taking a monthly beating and sold his properties, with the result that four tenants had to find other rental quarters. Doubtless there are thousands of similar cases. This Administration would do well to ponder the situation very carefully before imposing new restrictions or there just won't be any properties for rent.

Matter of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

The Third Answer

STALIN'S answers to the first second and fourth questions submitted to him have about as much significance as if he had come out flatly in favor of an early spring and a late fall. But according to those who are equipped to pick over the dictators's words for possible hidden meanings, there may be some real signifiance in Stalin's answer to the third question.

In this answer, Stalin names postponement of the west German government as his price for lifting the Berlin blockade, but makes no mention of the Berlin curren y issue. What makes this answer interesting is that the United States has recently advanced a formula for settling the currency issue. The new proposal has been made to the United Nations committee of neutral experts, meeting in Geneva. It can be reported on good authority that this new American formula calls for control by the Western powers over the currency in their sectors and over trade between these sectors and the western zones, and similar Soviet control over currency and trade in the Soviet sectors. Moreover, the formula calls for high-level negotiations for the establishment of a single currency and a single freely elected German administration of the city.

When the Russians first blockaded Berlin last year, there were two prizes which they wanted to win. One prize was total Soviet control of the city itself. The other prize was to prevent the organization of a sensible and functioning political and economic system in the western zones of Germany.

NO DOUBT they hoped to win both prizes But the endless, exhausing negotiations between the Western representatives and Stalin, Molotov and Sokolovsky in Moscov and Berlin last summer and fall at least made one thing clear. That was that control of Berlin was prize No. 1 in Soviet eyes, and that they were willing to settle, at least temporarily, for this prize alone.

Clearly they would have preferred complete evacuation of the city by the Western powers. But the unexpected success of the air lift gave the Western powers a bargaining position. Thus the Soviets were willing to settle for undisputed control of the Berlin currency, which would have given them effective control over the economic and thus the political life of the city.

The Western powers refused. The blockade continued, but so did the air lift. The Russians split the city in two, making four-power control of a single currency impossible. The new American formula recognizes this fact. If accepted by the Russians, it would make total Russian control of the Berlin currency impossible. And whether accepted or not, as long as the air lift continues, there is no way the Russians can control the currency or the city.

Moreover, it is now clear that the blockade of Berlin has thus far been a disastrous failure as an instrument of Soviet policy. It has wrecked the Communist parties throughout Germany, and the Western counterblockade has made the Soviet zone a terrible economic and political liability to the Russians

THUS IT is not unreasonable to suppose that the Kremlin is beginning to doubt that the game is worth the candle. Stalin's statement at least suggests that the Kremlin has abandoned hope of winning the first prize, control of Berlin, and would now be willing to settle for the second prize, postponement of the west German government.

This would not mean any basic change in Soviet policy toward Germany. But it could mean a change in emphasis—an all-out effort to persuade this country and Europe of the sweet reasonableness of the Kremlin and its single-minded desire for a real settlement in Germany, for which the postponement of a west German government would be a small price to pay.

There is nothing sacrosanct about the west German government. If there ever is a real settlement in Germany, there will obviously be no west German government, and it must be made abundantly clear that a real settlement is what the Western powers want. But to postpone the west German government now, under pressure of the Berlin blockade, could have the most serious consequences in Germany and all over Europe.

The time may come when the Kremlin will acknowledge that its policy in Germany has failed. Then a real change in Soviet policy and a real settlement in Germany may be possible. But Stalin's statement gives no ground for supposing that this time has come yet. And until it does come, there is no reason for reversing a policy which is now beginning to work as Stalin's statement itself suggests.

Development of Water Power Vital, Say Interior Officials

Vast development of the Nation's hydroelectric power systems in the next decade was urged by Interior Department officials before the Senate Interior Committee yesterday.

Undersecretary Oscar L. Chapman said the power output should be doubled within ten years. It is contrary to the national interest, he said, to let water power go to waste while stepping up power production from oil, gas and coal.

Declaring that water power is the only constantly-replaceable source of electric power, Chapman declared that "no amount of money or manpower can make up for a shortage of raw materials. We are only as rich as our resources or our ability to develop them."

"America's future is tied to its basic resources," he said. "Over the past few years we have had a preview of our future.

"Steel, lumber, aluminum, power and other basic resources have been short. Two things resulted from this situation:

"1. Prices went up.

"2. The life, expansion and independence of small business definitely suffered.

"Without these shortages, our national income might have been higher by at least 20 billion real dollars than it was in the last few years."

Present prosperous conditions have increased the demand for about everything in our economy, Chapman said.

"In the last 30 years our real national income more than doubled. Last year we consumed larger quantities of everything from oil to beef than people would ever have dreamed possible in 1919.

"What we all must think about is what our situation will be 30 years from now. We more than doubled our combined copper and aluminum output in the last 30 years. Meanwhile, crude petroleum went up five times and natural gas six times. Power use went up almost six times.

"Iron ore went up two-thirds, from 61 to 101 million tons. Beef on the range went up 37 per cent, from 6.7 billion pounds to 9.3 billion.

"We want to do everything we can to find and develop enough American resources not only to prevent shortage prices, but also to make certain that American industry will continue to grow on a sound basis."

'Merci' Train Bringing Flame From Eternal Light

The French Merci Train arriving here Saturday night will bring a flame from France's Eternal Light burning at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier under the Arch of Triumph in Paris.

The flame will be used to ignite a flambeau at the Tomb of America's Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery in an American Legion Honor Guard ceremony at 10:30 a. m. Sunday. Vice President Alben E. Barkley will speak at an official welcoming ceremony for the Thank You Train at 4 p. m. Sunday at the Pennsylvania Railroad's 14th st. yard, opposite the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Police Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller said yesterday there should be plenty of room for automobile parking in the neighborhood during the ceremony, and traffic will be cut off from the area for that period to make room for more parking if conditions warrant.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

New Broom In Illinois

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — With the inauguration here the other day of Adlai Stevenson as Governor, a current of hope went out across the prairies and through the towns and cities of this most popular State in the Union. It is the hope for good and honest government of a people who have endured much in recent years.

Childs

But no one knows better than the keen-minded new Governor how difficult is the job he has undertaken. And no Governor, it might be added, has taken office here in Springfield with a greater determination to clean house and end the graft, corruption and inefficiency that have afflicted this State.

Governor Stevenson's majority of 575,000 was the greatest ever given any candidate in Illinois' history. That is one reason national attention centered on him the day after election.

Then, too, the public always likes the drama of a David standing up to a Goliath. That is clearly Governor Stevenson's role in the face of deeply entrenched interests, political and private, that prefer to see things as they are.

The new Governor's inaugural address was a remarkable document. It was temperate, moderate, free of any noisy partisanship. But it went to the heart of what is wrong with the hodgepodge of State and local government, criss-crossing, duplicating, leaving every kind of rat hole for the crooked and the inefficient and those who benefit from their crookedness.

THAT IS the State constitution, which is a strait jacket making reform and change almost impossible. As was said recently, the only way in which the constitution squares with the facts of modern life is in its definition of the State boundaries.

Governor Stevenson proposes a constitutional convention to consider a thorough revision of this 78-year-old document, which has not been amended in nearly 50 years. Such a convention presumably would end the conflicts of authority and make modern, efficient government possible.

But because of the technicalities specified in connection with the popular vote necessary to approve such a convention, it will be difficult to bring it about. The voters of Illinois proved that they could get angry and indignant enough to throw out a cynical and corrupt administration with such an outpouring of votes as had never been seen.

Now they must show sufficient interest to give the new Governor power to make essential changes. Other States in recent years have successfully revised horse-and-buggy charters.

IN HIS inaugural address Governor Stevenson urged consideration of a State fair employment practices law to end "economic discrimination upon racial or religious ground." As he said, the whole world is watching us to see whether we mean the fine words that we speak about democracy and equality of opportunity.

Later at a press conference Governor Stevenson said he actively will back an FEPC bill in the Assembly. New York State already has such a law, which was passed during Governor Dewey's first term. So does New Jersey. A drive is on in Pennsylvania to bring adoption there of a fair employment practices statute.

In taking the initiative, the States are showing one of the great advantages of the Federal system of government. The late Justice Brandeis in one of his most famous opinions expressed it as follows:

"It is one of the happy incidents of the Federal system that a single courageous State may, if its citizens choose, serve as a laboratory to try novel social and economic experiments without risk to the rest of the country."

The laboratory test here is whether Governor Stevenson can restore something like decent and reasonably economical government. That certainly would be novel in Illinois after the holocaust of the Dwight Green administration. Probably no one ever will know how many millions went into kickbacks, graft and payoffs.

Given his own background in public life, in Washington during the war and then later in the United Nations, plus the distinguished record of his family in this State from the earliest day onward, it was inevitable after his victory that Governor Stevenson should be talked about as a Democratic presidential candidate for 1952. But having got some idea of the size of the task immediately ahead of him, he is doing his best to dampen such talk. There are a great many obstacles to be gotten over before 1952.

The Gallup Poll

Average Voter Underestimates Tax Rates in Upper Brackets

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 1.—The average voter has little conception of the size of the Federal income tax paid by persons in the upper income brackets.

He thinks that a man with two children who earns $50,000 a year pays around $5500, whereas actually the tax levy on such a person is approximately $16,000.

On the other hand, the general public tends to overestimate the tax paid in the lower brackets. Only about one person in four knows that a married man with two children who earns $2500 a year actually pays no taxes. The average guess is that such a man pays about $50.

These facts, brought to light through questioning a cross-section of the population, would indicate the whole matter of taxation is one of the chief "areas of ignorance" in public understanding.

The survey asked among other questions, the following:

"About how much do you think a married man with two children who earns $50 a week—that's about $2500 a year— NOW PAYS in Federal income taxes?

Questions also covered $5000 a year and $50,000 a year.

The table below shows the median average of the amount which voters think are paid in taxes, and the approximate tax which is actually paid at present.

Family of four earning:	$2500	$5000	$50,000
What voters think tax is	54	340	5400
What tax actually is	none	350	16,000

Concerning the $50,000-a-year income, fewer than one person in 10 in the survey came anywhere close to naming the amount actually paid. Only 11 per cent came within $5000 of guessing the actual tax amount of some $16,000.

House Tariff Bill Hearings End

By The Associated Press

The House Ways and Means Committee completed its tariff hearings yesterday. There were indications it will recommend speedy repeal of the Republican 1948 Tariff Act and restoration of the old reciprocal trade law.

This is what President Truman has asked.

The old law gave him power to cut tariffs as much as 50 per cent in return for concessions from other nations. The 1948 act put restrictions on this power.

House Democrats appeared to be forming in almost a solid line behind the President. Some Republicans were ready to do battle. But indications are that Mr. Truman will have his way on this legislation he says is needed to promote world trade and preserve peace.

The committee set a meeting for today at which it probably will take a formal stand on the tariff bill. The measure is likely to come to a vote in the House next week.

The American Farm Bureau Federation yesterday indorsed the President's tariff stand.

His testimony followed a stormy outbreak in which committee Democrats lashed back bitterly at a GOP charge that the Administration "is ruthlessly pushing its reciprocal trade agreements through to the detriment of our national defense."

Representative Reed (R., N. Y.) argued that Administration trade policies are destroying the American watch industry, which produces precision instruments in wartime. He proposed that a military witness be called to tell about national defense aspects of that industry.

The Democratic majority rejected Reed's motion. Reed then said the Administration "is afraid the American people may find out" the "disastrous fact" that the defense program is being hurt by the foreign trade program.

Representative Forand (D., R. I.) cried out that in Reed's statement "national security is not involved, but pure politics."

What do we mean by creative banking?

Just as today's scientists seek new products, new ways of doing things, new improvements to better our American mode of life, so do we here at American Security & Trust Company search for — and find — fresh, practical means to make your banking relationship with us most helpful and profitable to you.

Creative banking is no mere phrase at American Security. Rather, it is something you can see with your own eyes, whether it is a convenient new service we have introduced...a new branch office...or a Trust or Estate plan we helped design for the benefit of your family.

And, too, creative banking applies to the daily activities of our officers and staff. You see it in their desire to anticipate your needs...to give you your money's worth, and more, in banking service...to assure individual, personal attention to your requirements.

We would like to show you this creative banking in action at American Security. We believe that you will find it a welcome change from routine handling of your financial transactions.

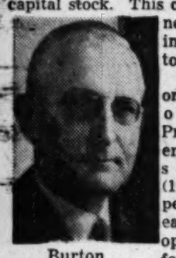
City Bank Net Sets New High Of $236,000

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of the City Bank reached a new peak of $236,000 in 1948, equal to $9.44 a share on capital stock. This compared with net of $222,224 in 1947, equal to $8.88 a share.



Burton

Commenting on the year's operations, President Clarence F. Burton said: "This (1948) was a peak year for earnings in my opinion. I look for less income, more expense and higher taxes in 1949. This will not be confined to the banking business."

Burton added that work is progressing on the erection of two new branch offices. One at 919 Pennsylvania Ave., will replace the branch at 10th and Pennsylvania and the other at 3839 Minnesota ave. ne., will be the bank's seventh branch. Both buildings should be ready for occupancy about April 1, Burton said.

C. & P. YEAR: An increase of $11,642,244 in plant brought Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.'s total investment here to $101,091,073 at year end, General Manager F. G. Macarow reported yesterday. The company showed a net gain of 37,211 telephones in service, bringing the total to 447,283 at the end of December. Net income for the 12 months totaled $3,082,744, a return of 3.49 per cent on investment. This compared with $2,387,028 for 1947, or a return of 2.80 per cent. A rate increase during 1948 helped to offset sharply rising costs.

SHELL PROMOTIONS: Shell Oil Co. yesterday announced two new executive appointments for the Washington area. Thomas R. Bakey has been put in charge of Shell's real estate development and acquisition in metropolitan

Bakey Holland

Washington and William J. Holland has been transferred from Baltimore to take charge of Shell's merchandising program here. Bakey joined the oil firm two years ago as a general salesman. He served during the war as a first lieutenant in the Army Air Corps. Holland has been associated with Shell for 10 years. During the war he served as a captain in the Army Air Corps.

AUTO SALES: New passenger car sales in Washington totaled 2436 in December, the Washington Automotive Trade Association reported yesterday. This brought total sales for 1948 to 28,546 as compared with 26,489 in 1947 and 16,286 in 1947.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: William R. Pitt, instructor of the new public speaking course to be started this month by Washington Chapter of American Savings and Loan Institute, was introduced at a luncheon meeting yesterday of institute officers and members at the Burlington Hotel . . . Dr. John H. Frederick of the University of Maryland faculty has been retained as a consultant by the Transportation Association of America . . . Robert W. Moffett, fabrication manager of Lukens Steel Co., has retired and will be succeeded by Raymond M. Dennis . . . W. Barry Jennings, formerly with the United States Travel Agency, has joined the American Automobile Association as assistant to J. E. Potter.

RECORD SAVINGS: More money saved per family than ever before, and more families saving than at any time since 1932, are the highlights in the United States Savings and Loan League's year-end survey. The average account at the year's end was $1125. During 1948 the number of persons having accounts increased by 5 per cent and the amount of savings accumulated in the system went up by 10 per cent. The aggregate savings in the associations is now $11,250,000,000, an all-time record.

LEAGUE FETE: More than 750 are expected to attend the annual dinner meeting of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League on Friday, February 25, in the Mayflower. Howard E. Thompson, chairman of the dinner committee, yesterday announced his assistants will be John P. Balster, R. Lee Baxter, Joseph P. Burke, jr., Martin A. Cook, R. Edward Early, Milton R. Johnson, John G. Kolb, John Raymond, Julian S. Scott, J. Hawley Smith, Horace J. Smithey, Donn B. Thomas, John Thompson, Stuart Thompson, William R. Dwyer and R. W. Santelmann.

ODD LOTS: Sun Oil Co. netted $8.61 a common share in 1948 against $9.37 a share in 1947 . . . National Fireproofing Co. of Ohio, which makes building tile, has suspended all operations due to lack of orders . . . Printers Ink magazine reported national advertising in newspapers was 20 per cent greater in December than for the like 1947 month . . . Dun & Bradstreet reported business failures in week ended January 27 declined to 136 from the postwar peak of 142 in previous week . . . January Warmest In 12 Years Here

Other Grains Drop

New Lows Recorded on Corn Futures

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP).—Seasonal lows were recorded in all corn deliveries at the Board of Trade today. There were also marked up new lows for the season in December wheat, deferred oats, May rye and July soybeans.

Traders said the decline was the result of weakness in the corn pit and lack of commercial demand in other futures. From the start of the session corn was easy, reacting to an overnight Government announcement that the Department of Agriculture would not apply acreage marketing restrictions on the 1948 corn crop.

At the close wheat was ¾ to 3 cents lower, corn was 2 to 3 cents lower, oats were ¾ to 1¼ lower, rye was 6¾ lower, soybeans 5 to 7 cents lower and lard 7 to 20 cents a hundredweight lower.

One contributing factor to the general selling was the weakness of soybeans. The Government estimate of soybeans in all positions as of January 1 placed the total at 180 million bushels, the largest of record. Last season's harvest amounted to 220 million bushels.

Substandard Home Figures Called False

Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers' Association, last night took sharp issue with National Capital Housing Authority's report thatt there are 44,000 substandard dwellings here which should be removed or extensively rebuilt.

"The statement in the annual report of NCHA that more than 44,000 dwellings in the Nation's Capital 'should be removed or extensively rebuilt' is ridiculous and utterly untrue," said the Washington real estate analyst.

Lusk said the NCHA statement was issued for one purpose: "To promote the cause of public housing."

He pointed out that if the statement were true, and refers to housing units, it means that approximately 19 per cent—or nearly one in five—housing units here should be either razed or remodeled.

"At an average cost of $10,000 each to bring these houses up to the artificial standards set by NCHA the cost would be almost a half-billion dollars," Lusk said. "This," he conceded, "would relieve the housing shortage."

The NCHA annual report submitted to Congress Monday directed blame for the housing shortage in the low-income group largely at the unfilled promises of the private building industry which, it said, "had prevented additional public housing."

2 Subdivisions Of Area Win Home Honors

Two Washington area subdivisions yesterda won honors in a contest to uncover what the better neighborhoods in America will look like in the future. The event was sponsored by the National Association of Home Builders and unveiled at a press showing at the United States Chamber of Commerce Auditorium.

First prize for the best subdivision of large family homes went to Sumner, Md., developed by the W. C. and A. N. Miller Development Co. Top honors for the community development class were awarded to East Pines, at East Riverdale, Md., built by Standard Properties, Inc.

Exhibits of winnning developments will be placed on view at the forthcoming national convention of the National Association of Home Builders in Chicago, February 19-24.

Sumner, a 60-acre tract of large homes off Massachusetts ave. extended, gained fame last summer as site of the local version of the Blandings' home, subject of the book, "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House."

Fifty-five homes have been erected there, ranging in price from $23,500 to $39,500. All are two-story, each with a different design.

East Pines is a community of 400 homes, with current price tags of $9250 to $11,400. Its 120 acres provide for a church, school, three recreational areas and a shopping center. The latter is scheduled for summer erection.

Driver Acquitted In Auto Death at Construction Job

William Davis, 29 of 331 McLean ave. sw., was acquitted yesterday of manslaughter charges by Trial Magistrate William B. Wheeler in Silver Spring (Md.) Police Court.

Davis was the driver of a truck that backed into and killed Fred L. Manuel, 65, of 431 Cedar st. nw., December 21 at a construction job in the 200 block of Dale dr., Silver Spring.

Manuel was superintendent of the project. One witness of the accident was Manuel's son, Stanley, who was overcome by shock and had to be hospitalized.

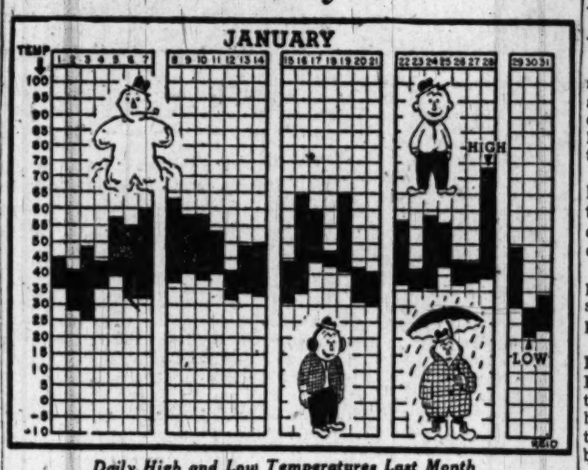
This Was January



Daily High and Low Temperatures Last Month

were four Januarys in a row, from 1931 to 1934, inclusive, that had only a trace.

January, 1949, had 20 days in which there was precipitation. The total of 5.08 inches compares with normal for the month of 3.55 inches.

Mean temperature for the month was 42.6 degrees, or 9.2 degrees above normal for January. There were 103 hours and 20 minutes of sunshine, or 30 per cent of the possible 303 hours and 38 minutes.

Normal for the month is 46 per cent of possible. Three days were clear, 10 partly cloudy and 18 cloudy. Sixteen days had measurable rain or snow, 4 days showed traces.

Average wind velocity for the month was 9.4 miles an hour. Normal is 7.5. Strongest wind was 39 miles out of the Southwest January 28.

January 28 set a high temperature mark for the month of 73 degrees. But that was 4 degrees under the all-time January record of 77, set on the fifteenth in 1932. Last month's coldest temperature was 21, recorded last Sunday. Record January low was 14 below in 1881. Normal mean minimum (average low) here in January is 25.7 degrees, but last month it was 34.7.

14 Hurt by Falls in Streets Iced by Freeze After Snow

Practically 100 per cent sunshine yesterday, after Monday's snowstorm, was followed by a quick freeze which made streets hazardous for traffic and pedestrians.

Increasing cloudiness, with a high around 40, was forecast for today after a clear night, with an expected low of about 25 in the city and 23 in the suburbs.

Police received reports of 14 persons hurt in falls in slippery streets, six of whom required hospital treatment.

Pvt. Benton B. Boyer, 34, Third Precinct, of 411 Addison st., Seat Pleasant, Md., fell when checking the door of a store in the 1800 block of N st. nw. and was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a broken left wrist.

Mary L. Sullivan, 43, of Bristol, Va., suffered a broken leg when she fell in front of the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., where she was stopping. She also went to Emergency Hospital.

Pearl V. Parker, 60, of 444 New Jersey ave. se., suffered a fractured wrist in a fall in the 900 block of 2d st. se., and went to Providence Hospital. Howard L. Minker, 37, of 321 C st. ne., was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible fracture of the ankle after falling in the 500 block of K st. nw.

Lillian E. Boyd, 39, of 150 Upsal st. se., was held in Emergency Hospital for an X-ray of a back injury after a fall at 6th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se. A fall fractured a bone in the arm of Fred Roe, 50, of 15 H st. ne.

Suit Filed in Both U. S., Virginia Courts

A District woman has backed up a $100,000 damage suit filed in Alexandria Federal District Court with an identical suit in Arlington Circuit Court.

The dual filing, her attorney said, was to insure that, if it is determined the case cannot be heard in the Federal Court, it can still be tried in the Arlington, or State, Court.

On December 31, 1947, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond declared unconstitutional a congressional act permitting residents of the District to file civil suit in Federal Courts of the various States.

The case was appealed to the United States Supreme Court and argued there late last year. No decision has yet been handed down.

The plaintiff in the damage suits is Mrs. Catherine L. LaPenotiere, 2551 17th st. nw. She contends that on January 31, 1948, Daniel E. Regalie, Arlington real estate man of 2301 Arlington Ridge rd., struck her in his Arlington home, causing "serious and grievous bodily harm," possible total loss of vision in one eye, and lost time from her job.

to Navajo Indians and feed for their herds.

An Army helicopter was used last night to land an Army doctor, Capt. John Magladry, at the Nos Pas Trading Post to relieve a lone physician at an overflowing hospital there.

Another doctor was parachuted last night into Tuba City, Ariz.

6000 in Critical Need

Interior Department officials estimated 6000 Indians in Arizona are in critical need of food.

The situation last night was reported by Assistant Secretary of the Interior William E. Warne as "much the same as for every day for the last three weeks."

"The difference," he said, "is that a recent air of urgency has surrounded the rescue work as overused machines have broken down, men have become exhausted, fuel has run out and people have reported they are burning furniture for heat.

"Cattle are observed from airplanes to be almost too weak to struggle to their feet for feed."

Army K-rations were dropped to stranded Navajos by a mosquito fleet of small planes, Warne said.

The State-wide organizations of the Production and Marketing Administration of the Agriculture Department have been turned over to State Governors in Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, South and North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Utah and Wyoming.

With chairmen in every county, the PMA is able to assist in reporting on distressed conditions, locating supplies of feed, lack of food supplies, as well as locating of equipment needed to get to disaster sites.

Modern farming methods have resulted in hindering some rescue work as compared with old days, reports to the Agriculture Department state.

"We can't get through the drifts with jeeps and tractors like we used to with horses and mules," Ralph S. Trigg, administrator of PMA, said.

Dr. W. H. Lamphere, PMA specialist, has just returned from the storm area in Nevada and Utah with many stories of heroism in relief. He told of airplanes flying out to seek a sheep rancher who had disappeared in a storm. The planes located his truck, deserted, some distance from a canyon. Several days later they located a sheepherder's camp not far from the truck.

Two Mystery Men

Flying low, to drop food, fuel and clothing supplies at the camp, the pilots were surprised to see three men appear. Where the other two came from nobody knows yet, but the neighborhood is stirred by the mystery. It is a deserted area where few strangers appear at any time.

A report from Verne Hopkins, State PMA director in Utah, sums up the situation as far as knowledge of losses are concerned:

"We're unable to determine what the losses are," Hopkins reported to Harry E. Reed, chief of the cattle branch, PMA. "They're great and will continue for a long time, even with a break in the weather. The situation will be serious for at least 60 days, and losses will continue even after the stock are put on pastures."

Reed declared that the livestock in the storm area "include the mothers of this and the next two years' calves and lambs."

The lambs, Reed said, to be born this spring will furnish meat this fall and winter; the calves our veal next fall or our beef in a couple of years.

Thousands too Weakened

"Many of these mothers won't be able to raise their young after they get them," Reed said, "in addition to thousands that will be too weakened to have calves at all."

"We'll have to wait for final reports on losses until the calving and lambing season is over late this spring," Reed remarked.

The greatest livestock losses are expected in the western Utah and eastern Nevada plateau, and the Red Desert of Wyoming and Colorado.

A factor making rescue work difficult has been the small supply of feed for livestock and, of food for humans in the storm areas.

Because of declining prices for both feed and foodstuffs, dealers have kept inventories low. The result is that such supplies are far below normal, Trigg reported. Supplies must be flown in from far distant points.

In western Nebraska and Wyoming, a new haylift was scheduled to start today, with 20 Air Force cargo planes flying 600 tons of hay (14,000 bales) from La Junta, Col., to Caspar, Wyo.

Forecasts Not Optimistic

Despite the absence of a major storm in the Nation, forecasts were not optimistic for today's weather.

In Texas, where Monday's blizzard was described as "the most severe in history," the temperatures would go as low as 20 degrees, accompanied by some rain.

Georgia, Mississippi, the Carolinas, Alabama, Louisiana and parts of extreme northern Florida also were warned to expect minimum temperatures of 20 degrees.

In Idaho, the Dakotas, Montana, Nevada, Wyoming, Colorado and Nebraska, the mercury would range from 30 degrees below zero to 20 above. The weatherman even dared to predict scattered snow.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

AROUND Turner's Arena, where they knew him well, the suspicion is that Dixie Oliver "musta got fresh with Joe Louis." In fact, I have a direct quote from Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, who said of Dixie, "he musta got fresh with Joe Louis."

Dixie is doing nicely, it is a relief to know, after hitting the deck in the sixth round of a Joe Louis exhibition bout at Orlando, Fla., the other night. Seems like he conked his head on the ring floor after being tipped over by a Louis left, and was a stretcher case.

POVICH

"Like he got fresh with Joe Baksi that night at the ball park," remembered Menendez. "Sam The Mumbler has Dixie, and he has just knocked out Gus Dorazio when they put him in with Baksi, and for six rounds he is boxing a circle around Baksi. Can't blow the fight if he stays careful.

"But in the seventh he is getting fancy and dancing off the ropes and The Mumbler is screaming to Dixie to stay away from the ropes. Dixie won't listen and he bounces off again and runs into a Baksi right and it's all over."

DIXIE WAS Washington's Fighting Janitor for most of the year he was a fistic figure in this town. Menendez brought him up from Tampa where Oliver was a $2-a-round sparring partner for Lee Savold and Buddy Scott and other white heavyweights who happened into town. Menendez put him on the Arena payroll as handy man.

Dixie made the Arena a homey place for himself. He installed a one-burner in the dressing room, and the aroma of stews and chitlins from Dixie's restyled kitchen blended with the arnica and smelling salts of the ring. He slept in the ring, come nightfall.

And he could pick up a few bucks as a sparring partner to add to his earnings as head janitor, and pretty soon he was licking most of the third-rate heavyweights who were getting main bouts. Menendez turned him over to Sam (The Mumbler) Sobel, a character, who promptly put Dixie under contract and had him fighting preliminaries, 75 bucks for six rounds.

That Sobel-Oliver contract began to look pretty good to The Mumbler when Dixie began tipping over some fair heavyweights and was promoted to a main bout with Gus Dorazio, who had been in there with Joe Louis. Sobel was eating well, too, off his one-third cut of Dixie's purses.

DIXIE'S NEW affluence didn't remain long in hiding. He quit his janitor's chores, and began to send out for his meals. Resplendent in new haberdashery, he was a buck-tip guy around the late spots, and with the Dorazio fight coming up he could make a nice down payment on a new car.

There were characters who tried to muscle in on The Mumbler's contract with Dixie, and they hinted to Dixie that he was getting a fast shuffle in the pay-offs from Sobel. When he knocked out Dorazio and got $500 for his night's work, Dixie put a gimlet eye on Sobel when the pay-off came.

The Mumbler stacked the shares neatly in two piles, but Dixie was skeptical. He wanted a recount. The Mumbler was losing patience.

"Here," said The Mumbler, "now watch. We got it all here in $10 bills, and I'm paying you off. Like this, see: Two for you, and one for me. Two for you and one for me." He went through the $500, exactly as their contract read.

DIXIE STILL had misgivings. He wasn't so fast on arithmetic, and certain people had been telling him to watch Sobel's fast counts. "You sure I'm gettin' all's coming to me?" he demanded of The Mumbler.

Whereat Sobel lost patience. "I'm not going to be insulted," he told Dixie. "Now look," and he shoved the whole pile of bills across the table under Dixie's nose. "You got it all, now," said The Mumbler. "Now, just so you be satisfied, you pay me off—two for you and one for me." That arrangement, Dixie could understand.

The profitable Oliver-Sobel partnership was suddenly dissolved by Baksi that night at Griffith Stadium. With the right that knocked Dixie out, Baksi also knocked him onto a Chestnut Farms milk truck where Oliver found gainful employment for the next few months. Sobel lost interest in him as a fighter.

Sobel's next interest was a lightweight named Oscar Wright. He changed Oscar's name to Atomic Wright, had some success with him, and later sold a half-interest in the Atom for $1000. Thus in two months, The Mumbler achieved the feat that had baffled the scientists of two continents for a hundred years—"I split the Atom."

Rockets Get Chappuis, New Backers, New Name

From Wire Dispatches

Chicago, Feb. 1.—The All-America Conference today fired a salvo in its renewed box office war with the senior National Football League with a number of developments centering around the A. A. C.'s Chicago entry.

(1) Twenty-six players, headed by Halfbacks Bob Chappuis and Bob Hoernschemyer, were turned over to Chicago by the Brooklyn Dodgers, recently merged with the New York Yankees. Four players from other A. A. C. clubs, plus the Dodgers' draft rights to 75 collegiate players also went to Chicago as the league strengthened its weakest club.

(2) The name of Chicago's entry was changed from the Rockets to the Hornets.

(3) James C. Thompson, wealthy president of the Chicago Civic Opera Building and director of the First National Bank, was revealed as the principal stockholder of the new Chicago franchise. Lee A. Freeman and Irvin Rooks, attorneys and public utility executives, joined Thompson in furnishing the Hornets with a $300,000 bankroll.

In addition to Chappuis and Hoernschemeyer, Brooklyn's contribution to the new Hornets, who'll be coached by Ray Flaherty, included such stars as End Hank Folberg and Center George Strohmeyer. From the Yankees will come Halfback Bob Sweiger. Buffalo has contributed Tackle Graham Armstrong, and from Baltimore will come Tackles Pete Berezney and Lee Artoe.

Simultaneously at New York, the Yankees disclosed they had taken Tackle Martin Ruby, Fullback Lou Kusserow, Fullback Mickey Colmer and Ray Ramsey, Halfback Roy (Monk) Gafford and End Scott Beasley from the Dodger roster.

At a press conference in Chicago, Thompson and his two ownership "affiliates" reported that the Hornets will probably continue to play Friday nights, mainly in Soldier Field, which was the graveyard of three previous All-America Chicago entries, and that Thompson believes his coach, Flaherty, "is the greatest in the business" and will have "supreme command of the team."

Thompson, who declared, "Let's have a helluva good team in Chicago and then worry about peace with the National League," confessed that his interest in football was "just that of any American interested in sports." An avid hockey fan and former sponsor of horse shows, he still has hopes of landing the 1952 Olympics for Chicago although the event has been awarded to Helsinki.

Thompson admitted that as late as yesterday he had to inquire, "where is the office of the Rockets." He was referring to the 1948 ownership locale of some 20 Chicagoans who went far into the red as the Rockets won one and lost 13 league games.

George Ratterman May Go to Yankees

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Reports that George Ratterman, T-formation quarterback of the Buffalo Bills, will come to New York were strengthened today by the disclosure that the new Yankee-Brooklyn combine has surrendered both Bob Chappuis and Bob Heernschemeyer to the Chicago Hornets.

Yankee Coach Norman (Red) Strader explained it this way at a press conference:

"We did not pick either of the Bobs because we have another experienced passer in mind. We are in the midst of completing a deal for one of the top passers in the conference.

"I'm sorry I cannot go further," he added, "but if I did, it might prevent the deal. The passer I have in mind is a T-formation man. As you know, I plan to switch to the 'T' next season."

Boston Yanks Become Bulldogs In Polo Grounds

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Boston's transplanted Yanks of the National Football League will be known in the future as the New York Bulldogs and will share the Polo Grounds with the New York Giants.

Ted Collins, owner of the club, previously had suggested the title New York Somebodies for his orphaned club when he moved them here late in December after a fifth disastrous year in Boston.

Collins said he expected to announce the club's training site and its new coach within a few days.

Locals Given Chance Against Virginia, Princeton at Armory

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

George Washington and Georgetown take up their double-header cudgels again tonight at the Armory with Virginia and Princeton providing the opposition.

Both local schools are conceded an even chance against tonight's ivy-conscious opponents. That's more than they had in the twin bill last Saturday that drew a record collegiate crowd of 6000.

It was a financial rather than artistic success although the hard-fighting GW club extended N. C. State to the limit before succumbing, 60-59. Villanova didn't have nearly as much trouble scoring a convincing triumph over Georgetown.

Virginia, which meets GW in the opener at 8 p. m., holds a previous decision. The Cavaliers scored a surprising 67-53 triumph at Charlottesville.

In that game, Virginia's Joe Noertker tallied 16 points. Noertker has been waging a close fight with Yale's Tony Lavelli for National scoring honors and averaged 22 points in his first 12 games.

Monday night, however, VPI scored a 52-50 upset over Virginia and Noertker's average took a dip to 17.2 when he was held to 15 points. Forward Ronnie Richard, who had 18 against Tech, is another scoring threat for the South's "Ivy Leaguers."

It can't be considered an upset if GW avenges that earlier defeat to Virginia. Actually, it's the Colonials' turn to win. In their last 10 games, George Garber's boys have set an exact pattern of winning one and losing the next.

Now that the one-point loss to N. C. State is heartbreaking history, GW's past performances call for it to triumph. Len Small, Bill Cantwell, Maynard Haithcock and Ray Adler did most of the scoring at Charlottesville and are expected to carry the offensive burden again tonight.

Georgetown, which had the unhappy 64-49 experience with then unbeaten Villanova, meets a Princeton team that has scored three successive Ivy League victories.

Princeton, dominated by footballers, also lost to Villanova, 47-25. However, the Tigers defeated Lafayette, 48-42, before Georgetown lost to the same team, 56-48.

The Hoyas, who dropped their first home game Saturday, have a different kind of streak to worry about. Ripley's boys have lost their last three games and are exactly at .500 wit ha 6-6 mark.

Princeton men responsible for holding the Ivy League lead—at least until the Yale game Saturday at New Haven—include Center Bernie Adamas, Bill Kelly, Capt. Joe Holman, George Sella, Ed Reed and Cliff Kurrus.

The last three named are members of the football team and Sella, classy halfback, is captain-elect of next year's squad. Kurrus, 6-foot-4 soph, scored 32 points against Columbia frosh last year.

In other games tonight, the traveling Terps of Maryland play Cincinnati U. away and Duke meets Navy at Annapolis.

Clipper Smith Becomes Lafayette Football Coach

Easton, Pa., Feb. 1 (AP).—Maurice (Clipper) Smith, recently resigned as coach of the Boston Yanks of the National Football League, today was appointed head grid coach at Lafayette College.

Smith succeeds Ivy (Red) Williamson who resigned last week to accept the head coaching job at the University of Wisconsin. Smith, a graduate of Notre Dame, coached at Villanova College and San Francisco University before taking over the head coaching job with the Boston Club two years ago.

Quantico Wins Playoff, 47-45

High-scoring Cy Waldrop dropped a basket in the last three seconds to give the Quantico Marines a 47-45 victory over Quarters I here last night in the first of a three-game playoff for the Potomac River Naval Command championship.

Waldrop, former Navy star, led Quantico with 26 points. Runnerup was Bill Jesse, football center, with 10.

Quarters I, which swept through 14 games without defeat in its section of PRNC play, was paced by Jim Spriggs and Red Rowland.

Quantico had a 13-1 record in league play. The teams meet in the second playoff game at Quantico Thursday night.

Kentucky No. 1 Team in Nation

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Kentucky has replaced St. Louis University as the country's No. 1 college basketball team in the third weekly poll of sports writers and broadcasters, conducted by the Associated Press.

Thirty-nine of the 71 experts participating in the poll decided Coach Adolph Rupp's Olympians belonged on top. They not only matched the 14-1 Kentucky record against a season mark of 13-1 for St. Louis, but had a 24-point Wildcat tdecision over Notre Dame to help them make up their minds.

The top teams figured on a point basis of 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1. (First-place votes in parentheses):

1. Kentucky (39)	663
2. St. Louis (25)	619

Neeley Declines Vanderbilt Bid

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 1 (AP).—Jess Neely, head coach and athletic director at Rice Institute, today officially declined an offer to take over head grid duties at Vanderbilt.

The former Vanderbilt football star wrote Fred Lewis, head of a committee looking for a successor to Henry (Red) Sanders who left to go to UCLA, that he "would not be justified in making a change at this time."

"The officials at Rice Institute have been most considerate of me for the past nine years and I feel definitely obligated to remain here," Neely wrote.

Eagles Sign Bednarik to '49 Contract

Philadelphia, Feb. 1 (AP).—(Chuck) Bednarik, Penn's All-America center, today signed a one-year contract to play with the Champion Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

James P. Clark, president of the Eagles, announced the signing of Bednarik as the "outstanding lineman" of 1948.

The Penn star graduates from the university in June. He was the Eagles' number one draft choice, being selected last November at an NFL meeting in Pittsburgh.

Vernon Under Knife

Cleveland, Feb. 1 (AP).—Mickey Vernon, the Cleveland Indians' new first baseman, will undergo an appendicitis operation in Chester, Pa., tomorrow, the Tribe front office reported today.

A club spokesman said he was expected to be able to report for spring training on schedule. Vernon played with the Washington Nats last year.

Hanley Sues Rockets

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP).—Richard "Dick" Hanley, former coach of the Chicago Football Rockets, sued today for $38,750 in back pay.

Hanley claims the money is due him under a three-year contract which will terminate next month.

His Superior Court suit said he signed a contract with the Chicago representative of the All-America Professional Conference on February 27, 1945. He was to begin working for the club on January 1, 1946, or when he was released from duty with the Marine Corps. He said the contract called for him to receive $15,000 a year, plus 10 percent

Early Lead Melts Away In Fourth Loss in Row

Special to The Washington Post

Indianapolis, Feb. 1.—Even last-place Indianapolis had the last word with the faltering Washington Capitols tonight, sending them to their fourth straight defeat, 83-69, in Butler Fieldhouse.

The lowly Jets let the invaders set a sizzling early pace, but, in the end, the Caps weren't even close.

Washington, hittin 11 of its first 21 shots from the floor, sped to what appeared to be an insurmountable 22-3 lead. Even when the period ended, the Caps had a comfortable 27-10 advantage.

As suddenly as the visitors started, they appeared to fold. Indianapolis started to move early in the second period and by halftime were only six points behind, 40-34.

After intermission the Jets, who now have taken four of their last five games, went to work in earnest. After five minutes, Charlie Black's tap sent them sailing ahead, 46-44, and the Caps chased them futilely the rest of the night.

Only Freddie Scolari kept his shooting eye throughout, winding up with 20 points. Capt. Bob Feerick and Bones McKinney, who scored 11 and 13 points respectively, could account for only 6 points between them in the last 3 periods.

The loss was the eleventh for the season against 30 victories for the Eastern Division leaders whose early 15-game victory streak was snapped here by Indianapolis.

10,091 See Celtics Lose

Boston, Feb. 1 (AP).—The Rochester Royals played the villans tonight as they spoiled the pro-basketball debut of George Kaftan and Dermie O'Connell, Boston Celtics' rookies from Holy Cross, belting the home team 76-68.

The decision proved a big disappointment to 10,091 fans, the largest crowd ever to attend a Basketball Association of America game in New England.

For two periods it was a tight game with Rochester in the van by a 16-14 margin at the end of the first period and in front 36-32 at half time. The third period decided the contest as the Celtics managed only 8 points as against the Royals 17.

Louis Has Clear Margin Over Ray In Second Bout

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 1 (AP).—Heavyweight Joe Louis kept intact tonight his record of always looking better in his second fight with an opponent. He had a clear edge over Elmer (Violent) Ray of Hastings, Fla., in a four-round no-decision exhibition here.

Louis, at an announced weight of 200, rocked 200-pound Ray with a solid right cross in the third round that had Ray helpless for a few seconds.

Under special rules there was no count and Ray didn't go to the floor; but the referee stood between them about eight seconds to see if Ray was ready to continue. Louis solved Ray's crouching, bobbing style much better than in last week's six-rounder at Miami, when Ray made a considerably better showing. A capacity crowd of about 7500 saw the bout.

Nathan Steals Boxing Show

A cool, lazy-eyed 146-pound Fort Myer soldier bared a right hand which chilled his opponent and warmed the hearts of the opening night audience at the Military District of Washington boxing championships in the Fort Myer gym last night.

It was the right hand of Andy Nathan, starting defense of his 1948 MDW title, that stole the show. Nathan, looking sleepy and indifferent, stalked elusive Joe Rezendes of the Army Medical Center for a round and 30 seconds, pulled the stops on his right hook, and it was all over.

James Clark, one of three Fort Belvoir representatives who scored knockouts last night, was also impressive but with his left hand. Clark, weighing 135, hammered Sterling Quesenberry with left hooks for two rounds. In the third, Clark lowered his aim and Quesenberry crumbled with the first left to his stomach.

In all, five of the eight bouts ended in knockouts.

Another 10-bout card is listed for tonight, with the public cordially invited to fill up the 5000 seats for free.

James West, 134, Fort Belvoir, TKO'd Charles Peters, 129½, Army Medical Center.

David Schilling, 134½, Fort McNair, decisioned Ignacio Bustamente, 135, Fort Belvoir.

James Clark, 135, Fort Belvoir, KO'd Sterling Quesinberry, 135, Fort McNair, at 49 seconds of the third round.

Joe McKinnon, 133, Army Medical Center, decisioned Paul Williams, 134, Fort Belvoir.

Leonard Spaulding, 140, Fort Belvoir, TKO'd Lester Wilson, 145, Army Medical Center, in the third round.

Rex Rucker, 146½, Fort McNair, won by forfeit from Wilson Lime, 140, Fort Belvoir.

John Pratt, 160, Fort Belvoir, TKO'd Clifford McPadden, 157, Fort McNair, at 45 seconds of the second round.

Andy Nathan, 146, Fort Meyer, KO'd Joseph Rezendes, 145, Army Medical Center, at 40 seconds of the second round.

Frank Cannato, jr., 172, Fort Myer, decisioned Albert McDowers, 168, Fort Belvoir.

George Williams, 165, Army Medical Center, won by forfeit from Norman Brackson, 167, Fort Belvoir.

Ted Collins Picks a Name —Bulldogs

By Red Smith
NYHT News Service

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—When the moon comes over the mountain called Cogan's Bluff next autumn, it will shine upon the New York Bulldogs, a football team of sorts. This is the name which Ted Collins has chosen for his transplanted Boston Yanks, and nobody appreciates the aptness of the title better than Mr. Collins, himself. He has felt the Bulldog's bite.

It is a good name, with rich gridiron associations, having been used by a New England academy of some note and also by a team in Canton, Ohio, that was one of the most celebrated outfits of professional football's neolithic age. In the whole animal kingdom, Mr. Collins could not have found a more satisfactory critter than the bulldog, unless he wanted to select the katydid. That would have saved him the trouble of answering when the auditors looked over the club's books and asked, "holy smoke, who paid all these bills?"

In addition to his football team, Mr. Collins owns a 50 per cent slice of Miss Kate Smith, which is about as large a tract of honey bun as any man is entitled to. Fortunately for Mr. Collins and his carnivorous athletes, he owns the part that sings. That is why he can still operate after losing—according to an estimate attributed to him last November—$720,000 in four seasons of professional football.

AS THE THIRD and least distinguished pro team in New York, playing as house guests in the Polo Grounds on dates the Giants don't want, the Bulldogs would be wise to chip in and buy a carload of lozenges, nasal sprays and gargles for Miss Kitty. If she got took with laryngitis, it could bloody well wreck the National League.

The New York Bulldogs are no shoestring proposition. They operate on a complete set of vocal cords. Girls and woman, Miss Smith probably has sung for the suppers of more steak-destroying athletes than any other artist since Mr. Collins invented radio.

Some years ago Mr. Collins, a reformed basketball pro himself, perpetrated a professional basketball team called Kate Smith's original Celtics because they weren't the originals and weren't necessarily Celts. When this enterprise was abandoned after about three seasons, Mr. Collins' published estimate of the damage was $30,000. This was the equivalent of six saccharine "Hello, Everybody's" and four choruses of "God Bless America."

Mr. Collins next folded the Long Island Indians, a minor league football team, under an angelic wing. There has been no public statement as to what this venture may have taken out of Miss Kate's larynx. Next she sang her big, generous heart out to feed the Boston Yanks, and now come the New York Bulldogs, with Miss Smith still in grand voice.

Howard Tumbles Lock Haven, 57-47

Howard University avenged an early-season loss by beating Lock Haven, Pa., Teachers, 57-47, last night in a basketball game at the Howard gym.

In their previous meeting, Lock Haven walloped Howard, 53-37. George Jett was Howard's big gun last night with 15 points.

Roxborough Says

Gate Must Be Big for Louis To Defend Heavy Title Again

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 1 (AP).—Joe Louis' discoverer-adviser said today that the world's champion would put up his title for the 26th and final time in June—if box office appeal is right.

"If we arrange another championship fight for Joe, it will be under sponsorship of the 20th Century Sporting Club," said John Roxborough.

He made the statement after a weekend conference with Mike Jacobs, boss of the 20th Century Club.

Joe will fight one more time if we can arrange a suitable fight," Roxborough said. "By that I mean one with an opponent that will guarantee us a large enough gate to justify the time and expense required to get ready for a championship fight."

Louis himself stamped the pending June fight his last. "It will definitely be my last one. I mean it this time," he said.

Joe doesn't rate the contenders for his crown too highly, but he regards Lee Savold and Ezzard Charles still the two best prospects.

"I think they should fight an elimination fight to determine who gets a shot at the title," he said.

Roxborough, who discovered Louis in his Detroit gymnasium 17 years ago, virtually eliminated the bid by a group of Chicagoans for a title fight between Louis and Joey Maxim.

"Their counter offer was so far under our offer that I doubt very seriously whether we'll ever get together," he explained.

He declined to discuss either offer.

Oliver OK, Says 'That Louis Sure Hits Hard'

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 1 (AP).—"That Louis sure hits hard," was Dixie Lee Oliver's comment today after he got out of the hospital.

The 222-pound Oliver was a knockout victim of Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis in an exhibition bout here last night. A long Louis left dropped Oliver in the fourth round and he hit his head on the unpadded ring floor. It put him to sleep for more than 10 minutes.

Louis visited his victim in the hospital last night and again this morning before leaving for an exhibition in Jacksonville tonight. The champion dipped in his pocket to pay Oliver's hospital bill and give him some spending money.

Doctors said there was no evidence of serious damage to Oliver's head after examining X-rays and released him from the hospital.

Coolidge Beaten

Coolidge's Jay Vee team was defeated, 45-38, yesterday by St. John's on the victors' court. Bobby Reese paced St. John's with 11 points for their seventh win in nine starts.

Tigers Hold Jim Pantos To 6 Points

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Wilson's Green Tigers tightened their grip on first place in the Interhigh basketbal league yesterday by holding Jim Pantos to six points and humbling the defending champion Central Vikings, 33-29, at the Armory.

It was the fifth straight win for the unbeaten Tigers, and came in the second game of a doubleheader before 1213 fans. In the first game, McKinley Tech whipped Western, 43-35, and took over sole possession of fifth place.

INTERHIGH LEAGUE STANDINGS

Central	4	2	.667	Ch'berlain	1	5	.167
McKinley	3	2	.600	Bell	0	4	.000

Second place Eastern tries to whittle down Wilson's one-game lead this afternoon when it tackles third place Coolidge in the first game of a 2:30 doubleheader at the Armory. In the second tilt, Roosevelt faces Anacostia.

Wilson's George Pappafotis, fraternity brother of Pantos, and one of his closest chums since their days at the Boys Club of Washington, completely shut out the league's leading scorer during the first half. Pantos finally wound up with three field goals in 14 attempts.

For the first time this season Wilson disregarded its two-team system, and substituted only three times.

Wilson bounded into an 11-8 first quarter lead, and Central was never able to catch up. Leo Speros dropped in 13 points to keep Wilson ahead, and Jim Young, Don Scott and Preston Kavanaugh outjumped the taller Vikings to keep the ball in Tiger possession for 70 per cent of the contest.

Central posed its biggest threat in the fourth quarter after Young had fouled out. A field goal by Pantos cut Central's deficit to 29-27. However, Baker Smith, a reserve, dropped in a field goal and foul shot to pull Wilson out of danger. The Tigers iced the game by keeping the ball during the last 2 minutes and 40 seconds.

High man for Central, which now has a 4-2 record, was Lou Glickfield, New Yorker making his first Interhigh start. Glickfield scored eight points before he injured an ankle and retired early in the third period.

Although Tony Sgro, usual high man for Tech, was held to four points, Bob Curtis and Ray Brady notched 17 and 14 to carry the offensive load against Western. Curtis converted 9 of 11 foul tries.

He's 66—But Still Races

Washington Marathoner Mike Lynch, Like Tennyson's Brook, Runs On and On

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

TO A PUGGY GUY like me, lazy enough to take a taxi from the Statler Hotel to the Mayflower, Mike Lynch, the oldtime marathon runner, is a most remarkable man. You'll probably agree.

Haight

Mike, 66 years young, visited our sports department the other day looking as chipper as he did 20 years ago when prominent in The Washington Post's 10-mile races.

Asked about his condition, Mike almost knocked me out with a playful poke and said, "I weigh 144 pounds now, exactly my best poundage when I was in condition."

He admitted taking walks and going about 5 miles three times a week on the Rock Creek bridle paths.

"When did you take up horseback riding?" I asked.

"I haven't," he replied, smiling and sliding up the legs of his trousers. "I still use these and they hold up surprisingly well."

I couldn't help thinking of my own soft, chubby pins that apologize each time they pass one another.

"SOMETIMES Jimmy Montague and Haskell Clark come out and run with me," Mike went on. "They used to be marathoners but quit young—they're only 50 now. But if they're not around I jog along alone."

Asked if he could still go the grueling 26 miles 385 yards of the Spartan race, Mike replied, "No more. I tried 15 miles a couple of weeks ago and after going 12 a ligament in my right leg began hurting. My wind's as good as ever and my doctor tells me my heart is OK."

Mike bemoans the fact that this country isn't producing young marathon runners.

"Our boys proved they could take it in the war," he said. "When I read about the long distances they ran in boot camp I thought the war would produce a new crop. However, the youngster nowadays seems to operate on the theory 'never stand up when you can sit down; never walk when you can ride and never run when you can walk.' I guess too many autos, movies, radioes, etc., are factors."

He refused a cigarette and continued, "Then again, there's no money in it. For instance, I ran in 45 States and went to Europe three times, footing the bills myself with one exception. A New Jersey committee paid my way from Washington.

"TODAY'S youngsters don't like training. When I was readying myself for a marathon I used to walk 15 miles and run 15 miles on alternate nights—and after working on my feet for 12 or 14 hours."

Despite his years of running, Mike found time to raise two excellent athletes, Joe and Tommy, both in the FBI at one time, although the former is now an official in "Racing's FBI."

Joe and Tommy were three-letter men at Mount St. Mary's and were all-Maryland halfbacks together.

Mike smiled and said, "I could outlast either of them running and still can, for that matter."

The fine, old Irishman began his career by accident in the old country. He was a young tea salesman and covered the rural districts, walking from town to town. He arrived in Tipperary the afternoon of a cross-country race.

Mike looked over the field, decided to run, and won the event of 6½ miles over hedges and ditches and through streams.

HE DIDN'T think much about running until some years after reaching this country and settling in Washington. His weight went up 195 pounds and he decided to reduce via a calisthenics course at the old Carroll Institute.

The gym had a track and Mike began circling it several times before going home. Gradually he lengthened the distances and finally branched out into real competition.

"If I hadn't tried to look pretty, I probably would have made a better showing in my first Boston Marathon," said Mike. "But I bought a new pair of shoes and wore them for the first time in the race. I finished fourteenth. My feet swelled; something had to give and my toe nails were jammed out."

Mike raced until he was 50 and gathered a share of glory. He might have made some money in Cash-And-Carry Pyle's Bunion Derby, but he wanted to remain an amateur.

In the course of our conversation, the oldtimer said that there was no such thing as "second wind," maintaining it is really "second heart."

"The pump beats fast and furiously before the start and during the early stages of a race," he said. "However, it finally settles down and when it does a person thinks he has gotten his 'second wind.'"

Mike once ran for six hours. "I went to Rock Creek Park to train, changed into my running trunks behind a tree and hid my street clothes. When I came back, I couldn't find them, I ran all over the park until almost dark before I located the right tree."

Robertson's Goal Wins

Tommy Robertson dropped in 20 points and the winning basket for Sollars Plumbers last night to defeat the Brass Hats, 46-44.

Charlotte Hall Loses, 37-36, To St. John's

St. John's bounced Charlotte Hall out of the unbeaten ranks, 37-36, yesterday with Bobby McLindon's field goal with 50 seconds left in overtime beating the Hallmen at the Priory Gym.

Charlotte Hall, with eight straight wins under its belt, took an 8-6 lead at the end of the first quarter, but fell behind, 15-14, at halftime, and 25-23, going into the last quarter. In the last two minutes, Charlotte Hall's Dave Kline dropped in two field goals to throw the game into a 34-34 tie at the end of regulation time.

McLindon scored all three points in overtime as St. John's recorded its twelfth victory in 15 starts.

On the Town

Speaking of square pegs in round holes—and an excellent fit it is, thank you—the case of Wimpy Hall, manager of the Water Gate Inn, shouldn't be overlooked. Two short years ago he didn't know a popover from a pot roast. He admits it.

Lynn Reynolds

But that's nothing. It's the rest of his kaleidoscopic past that belies what he seems to be: a pleasant, self-effacing young man who helps run the Water Gate.

Wimpy used to be a fire-eater. He used to be the "target" for an Australian bull whip snapper. He used to be a ventriloquist. And if you were to order, perchance, a steak, or lobster, or whatever—only to find he's written it down before the words were out of your mouth—don't be surprised. He used to be a mind reader. Still is.

This paragon of dining establishment managers started out in life wanting to be a cowboy. So, while peddling papers here, he learned to twirl a lariat and strum a ukelele. Then he did his little act before a crowd, and decided he "liked to be in front of people." (That explains why, much later, he enjoyed being a bartender.)

Next came a stint with a carnival, where he had the job of sticking a cigarette in his mouth and standing very still while the Australian whipped it out. After that he "branched out"—took up fire-eating, magic, cracked a bull whip himself, became a sharpshooter with the pistol and rifle, learned juggling, mind reading, tumbling and tap dancing.

This idyllic existence ended with his marriage, Wimpy relates. He took up bartending, and that's what he was doing at the Water Gate Inn those two years back when Owner Marjorie Hendricks began looking for a manager.

The man with the biggest mouth in town and possibly the loudest (you can hear him for a country mile) is bringing down the house at the Club Bali these days.

That would be comedian Timmie Rogers, one of the funniest gents in these parts. Timmie hits the stage like a tornado, works like one, and leaves his audience wellnigh limp when he finally blows himself out. During that time, it's one song after another, on the order of "I've got a gal that's sixtee-five, and I'm just twen-tee-three."

Also featured at the Club Bali is vocalist Kathy Graves, who is making her first appearance Stateside after a tour of Europe. Then there's crooner Norvelle Reid, who can bend a note as well as Sinatra, and dancer Baby Scruggs, who can bend a hip with anyone. Backing these are Al Dunn and his combo (drums, sax, bass fiddle and piano) and welding it together neatly enough is emcee Marcellus Wilson.

The young lady whose pix adorns this column is 22-year-old Lynn Reynolds, pianist at the Neptune Room . . . Got it too late to use last week . . . Ernest, major-domo at the new Salle de Champagne (Cairo Hotel), has acquired a gleaming chromiumplated wagon to be rolled from table to table and from which he'll create crepes Suzette, rarebits, cherries Jubilee, and so on, as you please . . . The Crossroads, spacious nightery at the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, has a new show . . . Don Casanova makes with the Latin songs, Pat O'Dare, Irish-Mexican beauty, adds her vibrant voice, and a five-girl line rounds it out . . . Music by Ralph Hawkins and his band for dancing.—ROBERT P. Attention

Mr. Green and Mr. Murray

You, Mr. Green, speaking as the head of the A F of L and you, Mr. Murray, speaking as the head of the C I O, have both on numerous occasions called the Taft-Hartley Act a slave labor law. Why?

Is the Taft-Hartley Act a slave labor law:

because it prevents a union member from being fired from his job and kicked out of the union at the whim of a union official?

because under this Law union officials cannot force union members to pay exorbitant dues and are unable to collect unreasonably large initiation fees from new members?

because this Law rules out violence, coercion and intimidation as a means of securing union members?

because this Law outlaws the compulsory check off? It isn't enslavement is it, for the union to have to get the consent of the union member before dipping into his pay envelope?

because this Law protects the right of union members to a secret ballot when voting on such important matters as the election of officers, a union shop or acceptance of an offer to settle a strike?

because money paid by union members and employers into union, health, welfare and vacation funds cannot be diverted by union officials to other uses?

because this Law gives each union member the right to decide whether he shall take a grievance up through union channels or direct with his employer with a representative of the union present?

because this Law requires an itemized accounting by the union to its members of all receipts and disbursements?

because union members now have the right to ask the National Labor Relations Board for a hearing on changing unions or not having any union, the issue being decided by secret ballot?

because under this Law union members can, if they choose, go directly to the National Labor Relations Board for relief from any unfair labor practice by either the union or their employer?

because it is no longer possible for the union to keep an individual worker from getting a job because he does not belong to the union?

because this Law makes unions financially responsible for living up to their contracts and protects union members from being thrown out of work by jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts?

because this Law guarantees the same freedom of speech to employers the unions have always had?

because this Law outlaws the closed shop and requires both unions and employers to bargain in good faith?

because under this Law employers are not required to pay for work not performed?

because Public Welfare and Safety are protected by machinery set up in this Law to reduce the possibility of industry-wide strikes?

because under this Law the public is assured that its interests must be considered in labor disputes and at the bargaining table?

We believe, gentlemen, that these questions cover the main or principal provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act and eagerly await your answers, which should be quite helpful in clearing up the confusion which still exists in public thinking concerning this Law. Also, if what you call the slave labor sections of this Law are not covered by our questions, we'll be glad to have you tell us what those sections are and to explain the provisions in each, which give it the slave labor characteristics you attribute to it.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

War Assets Employes Will Be Cut to 5000 By End of Month

WAR ASSETS is laying off 2200 additional employes, of whom 300 are in this city. The big postwar agency will be down to 5000 employes by the end of this month. At one time it had nearly 60,000 people.

Meantime, WAA officials are appealing to Congress for 15 million dollars to continue its present operations through June 30 or until such a time as the agency is made a part of a general property management bureau. Even if Congress grants the requests, WAA would continue to reduce its staff.

WAA must be abolished on February 28 and its activities transferred to four different agencies under the present law. Both the President and WAA officials have appealed to Congress to extend the life of the agency.

REPRESENTATIVE JIMMY MORRISON, the ranking Democratic member of the House Civil Service Committee, has in a bill to provide optional retirement for Federal workers who are 60 and who have had at least 25 years of service. The Administration will oppose the legislation.

LABOR BILL:—The Senate Labor Committee will call as witnesses on the Administration's new labor bill several former employes of the Conciliation Service to express their views on whether the now independent Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service should be transferred back to the Labor Department. Walter Munro will be among those to be called.

REPRESENTATIVE HENRY J. LATHAM of New York has in a bill to exempt from Federal income taxes the annuities paid Federal, State, county and municipal employes . . . HENRY WAEGELEIN has been appointed deputy director of the ECA's transportation division. He has served in Maritime, State and Lend-Lease. His appointment is a good break for a good career man.

EXAMS: Civil Service yesterday began to accept applications for public health nurse to pay from $3727 to $4479, and for physiologists to pay from $3727 to $10,305.

CONFIDENCE: Jesse M. Donaldson yesterday was given a solid vote of confidence by the Senate Civil Service Committee. The committee unanimously indorsed him for confirmation for another term as Postmaster General.

WALTER LEE DUNHAM, a Detroit banker, has been nominated by the President for the GOP vacancy on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He will replace Henry Bodman, another Detroiter, who resigned.

CHAIRMAN TOM MURRAY has called an organization meeting of his House Civil Service Committee for tomorrow. He will appoint a subcommittee, he said, to hold immediate hearings on the Miller bill to give $330 retroactive annual pay raises to the District's classified and Foreign Service employes, and to raise the salaries of 200-odd Federal executives. On the Senate side, the Administration is finding it difficult to whip up new interest in the executive pay bill.

CAFETERIAS: A bill to set up a new Government corporation to operate cafeterias, snack bars, and recreation activities on Federal property has been introduced by Senators Johnston (D., S. C.) and Baldwin (R., Conn.). It has the backing of the Administration.

The bill would give the corporation the power to take over the above operations. The new agency could operate them itself or it could lease them out. The President would be the corporation's head but he could delegate his power and could place the corporation in any agency he might wish.

No provision is made for present cafeteria and recreation employes.

RFC: William E. Willett was confirmed by the Senate as a member of the RFC board after Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) had this to say about him:

"This nomination is one which seeks to retain in the service of the Government a thoroughly competent public servant who has proven his competence both in private industry and as an official and director of the RFC."

AMC: A lounge room for off-duty civilian employes has been established at the Army Medical Center here. It also will be available for office parties . . . An exam for criminal investigator is open at the Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md. The jobs pay $3727 to start.

CORRECTION: The total sum Uncle Sam plans to pay out for salaries in the 1950 fiscal year is $6,600,000,000. However, the proposed budget carries only $5,100,000,000 for salaries. The difference between the two figures is accounted for by the fact that about half a million employes are paid from current income of their agencies such as the Postoffice Department. The total salary figure isn't eight billions as was reported here several days ago.

COMPENSATION: The Lesinski-Murray bill to increase the compensation of Federal workers who are injured on the job is due for early action in Congress. It took another frightful injury to a Federal employe to underline the inadequacy of the present law.

That injury took place several days ago in the Bowling Green, Ky., postoffice. A postal clerk, William H. Osborne, lost both hands and the sight of both eyes when a bomb exploded. The maximum Osborne can receive is $116 a month. But the Osborne case is merely one of many horrible accidents that have happened to Federal employes in line of duty.

Later Hours For Sales of Liquor Urged

Metropolis View Citizens Propose Move to Combat Clubs' Activities

A motion calling for extension of the hours of sale of alconolic beverages in licensed District night clubs and restaurants was adopted unanimously last night by the Metropolis View Citizens Association.

Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell, president of the association, said the motion was proposed by Vincent P. Boudren, a former association president, as a means of eliminating after-hours clubs and their sale of liquors.

The members meeting at the Crosby Noyes School, 10th and Franklin sts. ne., also renewed their stand in support of a "fair trade law" legalizing price contracts between District wholesalers, distillers and retailers.

The association indorsed the recommendation of Wilbur S. Finch, president of the D. C. Central Suffrage Conference, for membership on the District Board of Education, to represent the District's Northeast Section.

MacArthur Boulevard

Mrs. Henry J. Steimer, 5319 Potomac ave. nw., and H. E. Van Gelder, 4845 Hutchins pl. nw., last night were elected the MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association's delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Both delegates are long-time members of the association.

The group, meeting at the Palisades Field House, Dana and Sherrier pls. nw., also adopted a motion to oppose revision of the District's rezoning regulations to allow parking lots on vacant tracts within 500 feet of commercial property.

Columbia Heights

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution that approved legalization of horse racing in the District as a means of increasing District revenues.

Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, the association's president, said the motion was passed shortly after its proposal by George H. Brown, chairman of the association's tax committee.

At the meeting of 55 members at the Christian Church Hall, 1435 Park rd. nw., Mrs. Hersey Munroe, 1441 Clifton st. nw., chairman of the group's sanitation committee, was appointed a representative to the North Washington Council of Citizens Associations' cleanup campaign committee.

North Cleveland Park

Persons belonging to any organization declared by law or governmental agency to be subversive are barred from membership in the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association under a new constitution adopted last night in a meeting at the Hearst School, 37th and Upton sts. nw.

The group adopted resolutions opposing transfer of playgrounds from the District Recreation Department to the National Capital Park Commission, and favoring a District sales tax.

J. B. Dickman, jr., was elected president; W. A. Gallahan, vice president; J. W. Howes, treasurer, and George T. Hutchinson, secretary. Dickman and W. A. Harper were named delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Dickman and Vincent L. Toomey, jr., delegates to the Northwest Council.

Prince Georges Man Overcome Working on Car

A 23-year-old Prince Georges County man was overcome by gas fumes last night as he was repairing his automobile in the basement garage of his home, 50 Sargent rd., near the District line.

Maryland police said Edward Bickford was found unconscious in the garage. His mother, Mrs. Helen Bickford, 48, and his grandmother, Mrs. Elsie Moulton, 79, also were affected by the fumes. They were in the upstairs part of the house.

Bickford and his mother were treated at Leland Memorial Hospital and released. Mrs. Moulton was admitted in undetermined condition.

Strayer Gives Stress to View On Cardozo

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Dr. George D. Strayer declared yesterday that he "stands pat" on his recommendation that no need exists for a Negro high school to replace Cardozo.

The author of the Strayer report, which calls for a 38-million-dollar school construction program for the city, said that "it is not essential for the city to have a special school devoted to business education to offer business courses."

Strayer in his report to Congress said the present Cardozo building should be abandoned and the proposed Spingarn and Armstrong High Schools be expanded to accommodate Cardozo pupils.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning, giving his views on the Strayer report to the Board of Education Monday, said that a replacement for Cardozo is essential to provide concentrated business training for Negro youth and to accommodate the heavy Negro population in the Northwest.

All over the United States comprehensive schools are offering business courses, Dr. Strayer said.

The cost of a new school cannot be justified when the students can be cared for adequately at Armstrong and Spingarn, he said.

Pointing out that a site in the northwest section would be costly, Dr. Strayer said it would place no great hardship on the high school students to travel to the northeast section to attend Armstrong or Spingarn.

Dr. Strayer said that with the exception of Cardozo his views and those of Corning are "by and large in agreement."

The survey director described as a "thoroughly good thing to do" Corning's proposal to turn the white Park View Elementary School, Warder and Newton sts. nw., into a Negro school, saving the cost of building a Negro elementary school in the area.

Dr. Strayer also said he approved the transfer of students at the Webster Americanization School to the Adams School, 19th and California sts. nw., and continued operation of the Oyster School, 29th and Calvert sts. nw., accommodating students now at Adams.

"There constantly will be reshuffling to make the best use of facilities," Dr. Strayer said.

Use of Bowen School By Negroes Proposed

The S. J. Bowen School, formerly a white elementary school at 3d and K sts. sw., will become a Negro elementary school under a proposal of Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning.

The school head will recommend to the Board of Education at its meeting today that students at the Negro Smallwood Elementary School be transferred to the Bowen building. The Smallwood School will be used for storage under the proposal.

Transfer of the building was requested by the Southwest Civic Association.

The Bowen School housed white students until December, 1947. During the past year it has been used as an annex to the Negro Randall Junior High School. The building was vacated several weeks ago on completion of the Randall addition.

'The Reno' Rendezvous Called 'Nearest Thing to Iniquity'

A certain 9th st. gathering spot is "the nearest thing to iniquity," according to a police witness.

The spot is the Reno Foods Corp., located at 929-931 9th st. nw., and better known by the shorter name of the Reno.

In the words of police, it is a rendezvous for prostitutes, drug addicts and drunks.

Activities at the Reno were described by police before the District License Board, which listened to an appeal from an October decision of the License Bureau denying the Reno a renewal of its restaurant license.

Capt. Howard V. Covell, commander of the First Precinct, many of his policemen who patrol 9th st. beats, and members of the police narcotics squad were among the witnesses.

According to Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise, board chairman, they testified the Reno was a regular port of call for the police patrol wagon and on a busy night as many as seven patrons would be hauled away.

A member of the narcotics squad said the police seemed to attract the largest gathering of drug addicts of any spot in the District.

One policeman said the Reno is "the nearest thing to iniquity."

Police contended that John C. Miliarakis, the proprietor, wasn't aggressive enough to keep his motley clientele within proper bounds.

Miliarakis told the board he has now hired a bouncer to keep order among his customers.

Chatham T. Nottingham, superintendent of licenses, last October denied the Reno's request for renewal of its restaurant license because of unsanitary conditions reported there by Health Department inspectors.

The Reno, through Rudolph B. Behrend, attorney, who is also landlord of the building occupied by the Reno, then asked the District Commissioners for a hearing before the License Board.

Early last year the Alcoholic Beverage Board suspended the Reno's liquor license for 10 days for selling liquor to an intoxicated person and for permitting drunkeness on the premises. A few weeks later, the ABC Board refused to renew the Reno's liquor license.

Robber Pays Jewelry Store Return Visit

A short sandy-haired robber yesterday paid a return visit to the S. Franks Jewelry Co., 1104 14th st. nw., and for the second time in less than two weeks robbed the owner, Samuel Franks, 37, of cash and jewelry.

Yesterday's visit was at 12:55 p. m. while Franks was alone. The bandit got about $65 in cash and a diamond ring, valued at $50.

On the visit January 17 at 3 p. m. Franks also was alone. At that time the robber got $300 in cash and diamond rings, worth approximately $2000.

Both times, the man was described as being about 30 years old, having light hair, and wearing a rough tweed topcoat. Franks told police he believed it was the same man.

When the man entered the store yesterday he pulled out a .32-caliber gun and demanded: "Give me the money in your billfold and cash register and the best ring you have," Franks told police.

He said he handed over about $35 from his billfold, about $30 from the cash register and the diamond ring. The man then fled on foot, running north toward Thomas Circle, according to police.

The jewelry store was held up also about two years ago, but that robbery was pulled by a different man, Franks told police.

Death Toll 6 As Man Dies Of Auto Hurts

A 61-year-old man, injured last September 15 when he was struck by an auto walking in the street at New York ave. and M st. nw., died early yesterday at Gallinger Hospital.

He was George Wicker of 1151 1st st. nw., who received a fractured right leg and several broken ribs in the accident. He had been hospitalized since that time.

Following an autopsy at the District Morgue, Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy said his death was due to complications resulting from the injuries. Gangrene developed in the fractured leg which had to be amputated, and Wicker also developed pneumonia, Dr. Murphy said.

Police listed the driver of the auto as Harold J. Terhune, 46, an insurance salesman of 76 New York ave. nw. He will appear at a coroner's inquest Thursday at 11:30 a. m.

Keneipp Plans Faster, Safer Traffic Flow

District Traffic Director George Keneipp wants to concentrate this year on giving Washington drivers "more green light time" and pedestrians, especially children, more safety crossing streets.

He outlined the progress of his two-year-old program for safer and faster flow of traffic here at a monthly meeting of the District Advisory Board of the American Automobile Association at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

Fairfax Board Asks State Assembly Call

A special session of the Virginia General Assembly to appropriate "a minimum" of 25 million dollars for school construction purposes was asked yesterday by the Fairfax County School Board.

It was the second time recently that the school board has asked a special session during 1949. On the first occasion, the board asked that the legislature meet to enact a State sales tax for school purposes.

The school board acted after hearing a representative of the Fairfax school emergency committee declare that Virginia will have an unearmarked surplus of $42,100,000 during the 1948-50 biennium.

In its motion, the board requested that the 25 million dollars be turned over to the State Literary Fund, from which school districts could borrow to finance their school construction.

Representing the Fairfax school emergency committee was W. Alvord Sherman, chairman of a special subcommittee which has studied financing for public schools.

Sherman also told the board that Virginia has a kitty of $84,800,000 tucked away, "unused," in its "capital outlay" fund, which provides for specific items such as hospitals, colleges and penal institutions.

5 CTC Buses To Inaugurate Music Monday

A select few District bus riders may travel to music Monday, the Capital Transit Co. announced yesterday.

A company spokesman said it is hoped to have five or six radio-equipped buses operating in northwest Washington by that day.

The radios will pick up programs from WWDC-FM, and Ben Strouse, one of the owners of the station, has promised commercials will be "brief and conservative."

The first buses to be equipped will be in the transit company's western division and if you're shopping for a ride on one of the new radio buses next Monday, the Nebraska ave., Connecticut ave. and Loughboro rd. lines will be your best bets.

The company plans to equip all of its buses with radios, and then will begin installing them in streetcars.

The W. M. & A. bus line has had one radio-equipped bus in service for about a week, alternating it on three routes.

R. A. Chew, traffic manager of W. M. & A., said his company plans to have all 50 of its buses that are in regular service eventually equipped with radios.

Chew said he wished the public would realize that the radios are not costing the bus company any money, and in fact will profit from the plan. The cost of the radios and their installation are paid by the radio station.

Action on D. C. Pay Increases Forecast Soon

Johnston, O'Conor See Senate Priority On Rise for 7600 Classified Workers

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senators Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) and Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) yesterday forecast early rush action on a retroactive $330 pay boost for some 7600 classified District employes.

Johnston is chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee and a member of the Senate District Committee.

O'Conor is chairman of a Civil Service Subcommittee assigned to handle pay legislation. The proposed $330 annual pay raise for District classified employes would put them on a par with Federal workers. For the District workers, the pay boost would take effect as of last July when Federal classified workers got their $330 increase.

Priority for D. C. Bill

Johnston and O'Conor announced that they had agreed that the District pay boost should be expedited and placed ahead of other pay legislation. Coupled to the District increase would be similar retroactive pay boosts for foreign service employes, who were barred from last year's general pay raise.

Johnston said he had heard no disagreement with the idea of moving the District and foreign service pay rases to the Senate ahead of other pay legislation.

The proposed $330 increase for the two groups reached the Senate floor earlier in the session, as part of the Presidential pay raise bill, but was knocked out there to permit clearing pay increases for the President, Vice President and the Speaker of the House before Inauguration Day.

Johnson said he would seek to bring about early District Committee action on similar pay legislation for other groups of District employes, including police, firemen and teachers, whose pay adjustments are made in legislation separate from that for classified District workers.

Parallel action is being started in the House for police and firemen. There, a subcommittee headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) will open hearings Friday on legislation to give District police and firemen a $330 pay rase retroactive to last July.

Friday Only

Hearing Set For Public on D. C. Budget

A one-day open hearing for Washington citizens on their city's proposed new 103-million-dollar budget will be held Friday before the House District Appropriations Subcommittee.

The hearing will begin at 10 a.m. in the Appropriations Committee Room on the street level of the Capitol's House wing.

Subcommittee Chairman Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) announced that his group will require witnesses to file advance written statements. Oral testimony will be limited to five minutes for each witness. Subcommittee aides suggested that letters asking to testify include the writers' telephone number so that individuals can be notified that they are scheduled to appear. Applications also can be made by telephone from 9 a. m. to 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. to 4 p. m. Thursday by calling National 3120, extension 213.

Agency Officials Testifying

Bates' group, in the time before the public hearing, plans to complete its hearings for District agency officials on their budget plans. Among those who testified yesterday were officials of the District Public Welfare, Corrections, Sanitation, Sewer and Vehicles and Traffic departments.

Meanwhile, Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate subcommittee in charge of District tax legislation, indicated that the forthcoming District revenue hearings would cover a wide range of possible ways to boost Washington's municipal income.

Hunt's subcommittee met in a closed conference with District officials to discuss the revenue problems created by the fact that the proposed budget, as now written, represents a spending total some eight million dollars more than the revenue that can be raised by the present law.

The Commissioners are urging a 2 per cent general retail sales tax to cover the budget deficit.

Hunt said the conference touched on the sales tax, the possibility of higher liquor taxes, and other revenue proposals.

He said that in this year's revenue hearings thorough study would be given both to District property taxes and to the size of the annual Federal payment to the District. Hunt said the committee would have a recommendation on the Federal payment eventually. He said he had no present conclusion on that question.

The Federal Government now pays the District 12 million dollars a year.

Yesterday's meeting of the Hunt subcommittee cleared the way for its joint meeting today with the House District fiscal affairs subcommittee headed by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) to plan procedure on the District revenue problem.

Police Job Fills Long Ambition

A long ambition to be a policeman was finally realized yesterday by Peter G. Barrick, 21, of 1318 Holbrook st. ne.

Barrick, who stands 5 feet 7¼ inches tall, had tried for a year and half to stretch himself enough to meet the old police force minimum requirement of 5-feet 8 inches. His struggle to grow a little had included numerous visits to several chiropractors.

But he never quite made the grade. Then last November, the minimum height requirement was dropped an inch to 5 feet 7 inches. Barrick lost no time taking his physical examination.

Yesterday he was one of 13 persons who were sworn in as rookie cops. They will attend the police department school before receiving assignments. The others are:

Fred Illinger, jr., 920 F st. nw.; Robert C. Ferguson, 4531 Blue Plains dr. sw.; Bernard C. Hollis, 4231 Madison st., Hyattsville, Md.; Carl Kalafatich of 2505 Bunker Hill rd. ne.; John W. McKinney, 1641 V st. se.; Embrey C. Minor, 3701 Varnum st., Brentwood, Md.; Evelyn S. Patterson, 2327 Champlain st. nw.; Charles H. Ralls, 1320 Shepherd st. nw.; Harold V. Stevens, 1460 Irving st. nw.; Edgar J. Swart, 4798 Silver Hill rd., Suitland, Md.; Virgie C. Thompson, 4836 Bass pl. se., and George A. Wolfgang, 3310 7th st. ne.

Sixteen police privates, who have finished rookie school, were transferred yesterday to the following precincts:

Donald H. Bailey, Third; Walter T. Behe, Third; Wilson A. Carlisle, Ninth; Peter T. Duffy, Third; Robert L. Gray, Seventh; Robert D. High, Thirteenth; Tadeuas Jusszcye, Eleventh; Frank S. Klebba First; Carl T. Larsen, Fifth; Ludwig A. Lewandowski, Third; Lewis C. Pregrave, Eighth; Edwin J. Ruff, Fourteenth; Alfred Scrima, Sixth; James O. Souders, Eighth; Thomas E. Tolliver, Tenth, and Charles G. Wright, Fourteenth.

Police announced the following routine transfers of 10 privates:

Phillip W. Broome, from the Fifth to the Thirteenth Precinct; William B. Crockett, from the Eleventh to the Thirteenth Precinct; Robert N. Hough, from the Thirteenth to the Twelfth Precinct; Henry A. McElvane, from the Tenth to the Twelfth Precinct; Joseph T. Roberts, from the Twelfth to the Eleventh Precinct; Chester Szuka, from the Eleventh to the Twelfth Precinct; Otis E. Troupe, from the Thirteenth to the Twelfth Precinct; John D. Wildman, from the Third to the Ninth Precinct; William A. Wyckoff, from the Third to the Thirteenth Precinct, and Clarence J. Williams, from the Thirteenth to the Fifth Precinct.

Sex Education Should Begin "Almost in the Cradle," Marital Expert Says

Sex education should begin "almost in the cradle," Dr. Abraham Stone, medical director of the Marriage Consultation Center, Community Church of New York, said here last night.

"A great deal of marital disharmony is caused by a great deal of misinformation about sex acquired in childhood," said Dr. Stone in an address at the George Washington University School of Medicine.

Therefore, he added, "sex education which begins at college, or high school, or even grade school, often comes too late."

"The relation between parents, their attitudes toward each other—and the way they answer questions of their children about sex—influence the behavior and attitude of the child toward sex even more than actual factual knowledge the child may obtain later," he said.

Education at home about sex should be supplemented later at school and by physicians and where necessary by marriage counselors, he said, and added:

"It's unfortunate that not one medical college today teaches budding physicians how to help couples make marital adjustments."

Ignorance and misinformation about sex constitute the main reason for many marital failures, said Dr. Stone. "So the emphasis of counseling should be premarital-preventive rather than remedial."

"But love alone cannot make a marriage successful," he warned. "Companionship based on mutual interests is the main factor today now that marriage can no longer be held together by external forces like religion, tradition, social mores and group pressure."

Dr. David Mace, general secretary of the National Marriage Council of Great Britain, who also spoke, declared that the "time has come when marital disharmony should be recognized as a disease."

"The disease can best be prevented by education of the child in the home, school and church," he said.

Beverage Licenses Here Total 1819

Alcoholic beverage licenses to a total of 1819 have been issued in the District thus far for the new license year which began yesterday.

This total is 155 fewer than the highest number issued during the past license year, but does not necessarily indicate a drop. Many purveyors of beverages wait until warmer weather to apply for licenses, thus saving part of the year's fee, according to Alan W. Payne, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board

The license fees collected thus far total $774,290, including $70,390 earmarked for the District's alcoholic clinic fund. This boasts the fund to $152,073. Development of the program for rehabilitation of alcoholics has been held up pending appointment of a director.

Licenses issued thus far with last year's totals in parentheses are:

Manufacturer — Christian Heurich Brewing Co., only licensee (1); wholesaler, class A, handling all beverages, 20 (22); wholesaler, class B, beer and light wines, 16 (18).

Retail—Class A, package stores, 388 (388); class B, beer and light wines, 671 (738) class C, restaurants, hotels and clubs, 536 (574); class D, taverns selling beer and light wines, 189 (235).

Caveman Capers

Caveman tactics on the part of Herman V. Richardson, sr., 40, no known address, got him into trouble yesterday. Richardson was charged with drunkenness and assault and threats on his estranged wife, Mrs. Maggie Richardson, 37, of 255 V st. nw. She reported that her husband scaled a ladder to get into her second-story bedroom window, dragged her from her bed, threw her to the floor, choked her and threatened to kill her. Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court imposed fines totaling $125 and ordered a $300 peace bond.

School Plans Ready

Preliminary plans for an addition to the Kate Waller Barrett School in Arlington will be shown to teachers, members of the school's advisory committee and to P-TA members at a special meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the school, 4400 N. Henderson rd. The plans for the six-room addition will be the first shown in the Arlington School Board's current $6,500,000 building program. School Consultant E. J. Braun will explain the proposal.

Auto Tickets Adjusted for 120 Motorists

Traffic tickets for failing to report for auto inspection were canceled for two motorists last week after they explained their inspection notices had been sent to wrong addresses.

They were listed as John Scott of 1314 Kenyon st. nw. and James C. Beeks of 1826 California st. nw. They were among 120 motorists for whom traffic tickets were adjusted during the week, police reported yesterday.

A ticket for having no inspection sticker was changed to a warning for Timothy Harrison, of 1024 8th st. ne., who told police his inspection notice was lost in the mail and he had to obtain a duplicate.

Also warned for failing to report for inspection was Lee Grove, a reporter for The Washington Post, who told police his new car had been recently inspected and he thought he had complied with the regulations.

A ticket for parking abreast was changed to a warning for Tris Coffin, a columnist for the Times-Herald, who explained he had made only a momentary stop. Paul J. Dennehy of 4801 Connecticut ave. nw., a photographer for the Times-Herald, was warned for parking less than 10 feet from a fire hydrant after he explained his car was pushed.

Tickets were canceled for the following motorists because of diplomatic immunity:

Thomas Mansy, Embassy of Iraq, parked overtime in a meter zone; O. Goertz, Austrian Legation, obstructing a crosswalk; A. E. Percival, British Embassy, standing in a "no standing from 4 to 6:30 p. m." zone; Charley Ochsner, Embassy of Switzerland, parked in a "no parking from 7 a. m. to 6:30 p. m." zone.

Heart Attack Is Fatal to R. C. Hurley

Raymond Cornelius Hurley, 57, senior auditor and accountant at the Bureau of Internal Revenue, died Monday night at his home, 4208 Yuma st. nw., following a heart attack.

A native of the District, Mr. Hurley was the son of the late Mr. Dennis Hurley and Mrs. Rose Anne Toner Hurley. He attended St. Peter's Parochial School, and the Columbus University School of Accountancy here.

An employe of the Department of Interior's Geological Survey and the Department of Commerce prior to 1919, Mr. Hurley joined the Internal Revenue Bureau in that year.

He was secretary of the Holy Name Society of St. Ann's Parish.

Mr. Hurley is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ella Crowley Hurley of the Yuma st. nw. address; three daughters, Mrs. Helen M. Curtin, 1605 Buchanan st. ne.; Mrs. Kathleen Martin, Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, Va., and Miss Regina Hurley of the Yuma st. address; a son, Raymond D. Hurley of 1727 R st. nw., and three grandchildren.

Requiem mass will be said Thursday at 9:30 a. m. at St. Ann's Church, 4400 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Rites Today Are Set for 4 Area Soldiers

Reburial rites for four Washington area soldiers, killed in World War II, will be held at Arlington Cemetery today.

Pvt. Adams

They are Pvt. Robert A. Adams, 5507 Farragut st., Hyattsville, Md.; Sergt. Claude A. Bodine, 610 Mississippi ave., Silver Spring, Md.; Pfc. Haywood Ward, 1325 Division ave. ne., and Pfc. Peter Zanakos, jr., 14 5th st. ne.

All will be reburied in company with 10 other Army, 4 Air Force and 1 Merchant Marine dead.

Private Adams died March 17, 1945, of wounds received as an infantryman in Haganeau, France. He was 27. Formerly an auditor for the General Accounting Office, he had been overseas less than two months when he was killed.

Pfc. Zanakos Sergt. Bodine

He is survived by his wife, Naomi; a son, Robert Lee, now 11, and a sister, who lives in Hamilton, Ohio.

Sergeant Bodine, wounded in France in November, 1944, was killed in Germany in March of 1945, two months before VE-Day. An infantryman, he had been in the Army since 1941. He is survived by his wife, Nettie C. Bodine, and a 5-year-old son, James Carl.

Private Zanakos was graduated from Eastern High School in 1942 and entered the paratroops. Prior to his enlistment in March, 1943, he worked for the Army Map Service. On August 12, 1944, he was reported to have been killed in France. He had been sent to England in January. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Zanakos, sr., 14 5th st. ne.; a brother, Anthony, and two sisters, Mary and Helen.

Man Gets 10 Days In Jail for Theft Of Auto Hub Cap

Annoyed by a wave of petty thefts in the Silver Spring area, Trial Magistrate William B. Wheeler yesterday imposed a 30-day jail sentence on Floyd H. Wright, 32, of 14 Watkins ave., Chevy Chase, Md., for stealing an automobile hub cap.

Judge Wheeler suspended 20 days of the sentence, however, when he heard that Wright has five children dependent on him.

Wright was arrested January 14 after Dr. H. H. Conner, Silver Spring dentist, looked out the window of his office at 7930 Georgia ave., and saw Wright removing the hub cap from the doctor's parked car.

Judge Wheeler said he is determined to impose heavy sentences on all defendants brought before him for petty thievery.

Mrs. Sally R. Hitt, 105, Dies; Social Leader Here in 1890's

Mrs. Sally R. Hitt, widow of Representative Robert R. Hitt of Illinois and one of Washington's social leaders throughout the 1890's, died Monday night at her Dupont Circle home, 1501 New Hampshire ave. nw. She was 105 years old.

Mrs. Hitt, described as "very beautiful" by those who knew her, first came to Washington in 1881, when her husband was appointed Assistant Secretary of State under Secretary James G. Blaine.

When a Democratic Administration took office in 1885, the staunchly Republican, Mr. Hitt, took over the unexpired term of a deceased member of the Forty-seventh Congress. He was returned continuously to Congress through 1893.

During their early years in the Capital, the Hitts occupied a house on the northwest corner of 15th and K sts. nw There Mrs. Hitt held forth as one of the city's social leaders, entertaining her K st. neighbors.

Among these friends and neighbors were the late Senator Eugene Hale of Maine, the late Senator Nelson Aldrich of Rhode Island, the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia, and the late Representative William S. Knox of Massachusetts. The late Miss Mabel Boardman, national secretary of the American Red Cross and former District Commissioner, and Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania, who afterward became Secretary of State, and Mrs. Knox also were friends of the Hitts.

Shortly after the death of her husband in 1906, Mrs. Hitt moved to the Dupont Circle mansion, living a more retired life from that time on. Confined to her home for the past year, she took a daily drive until that time.

Born in Lafayette, Ind., Mrs. Hitt was the former Sally Reynolds. Her older son, the late R. S. Reynolds Hitt, was a member of the diplomatic service for many years. A younger son, William F. R. Hitt, married Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of the late Senator and Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins.

She leaves her younger son, now of Middleburg, Va., two grandchildren, Robert R. Hitt and Mrs. Elizabeth Hitt de Hertelendy, both of Washington.

Private services will be held today at 3 p. m. at the family home, with the Rev. Dr. Harold Sedgewick of St. Thomas Episcopal Church officiating. Interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

E.H. Tompkins Masonic Rites Set for Today

Masonic services for Edward Holland Tompkins, 93, father of Charles H. Tompkins, president of the Charles H. Tompkins Construction Co., will be held today at 2 p. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Tompkins

A resident of the District since 1884 and long active in Masonic affairs here, Mr. Tompkins died Monday at Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, Md., after a three-month illness.

A native of Norfolk, Va., he was the son of Washington Tompkins and Mrs. Sarah Kennard Tompkins. He spent most of his boyhood in Richmond, Va., where his father, was employed by the Confederate Army as keeper of Libby Prison for Union soldiers.

Although Mr. Tompkins was only 5 years old at the outbreak of the Civil War, he remembered vividly the Union army's occupation of Richmond.

In 1872, when his family moved to Baltimore, Mr. Tompkins came to the District for a short time, then returned to Baltimore, where he married the former Miss Louise O. Chappell in 1875. On his return to Washington, he established a tinning, heating and plumbing business that bore his name for 35 years until his retirement about 1923. Mrs. Tompkins died in 1917.

Mr. Tompkins had lived with a son, E. Wesley Tompkins, at Manor Clubs Estates, near Norbeck, Md., since the outbreak of World War II.

He was a member of Almas Temple and the Albert Pike Consistory. He had been a master of the Myron M. Parker Masonic Lodge No. 27; high priest of Capital Chapter No. 11, Royal Arch Masons, and commander of the Orient Commandery, Knights Templar, now merged with the Washington Commandery No. 1.

Mr. Tompkins is survived by three sons, the third being Samuel M. C. Tompkins, 1229 Michigan ave. ne., and three daughters, Mrs. Edna H. Sobotka and Mrs. Estelle T. Diehl, both of the Clifton Terrace Apartment, and Miss Ethel L. Tompkins of Colonial Village, Arlington; nine grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Thomas H. Dougherty

Mrs. Thomas Hugh Dougherty, 84, wife of a retired employe of Rudolph & West, hardware dealers here, died Monday at the Washington Home for Incurables following a long illness.

Mrs. Dougherty

Mrs. Dougherty, the former Alice May Young, was born in Ellenville, N. Y. She was married to Thomas Dougherty in 1895, moving with him to the District in 1918, when he came here as an employe of the hardware company.

She leaves her husband, of 3726 Upton st. nw.; a daughter, Mrs. Douglas Greenhill and two grandchildren, all of Hinsdale, Ill. Also surviving are two brothers, Capt. Frederick H. Young, USCG, retired, and Capt. Albert W. Young, retired Merchant Marine officer, both of San Francisco, and a sister, Mrs. Leila W. Marshall of 3703 Bangor st. se.

Services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin st. nw. Cremation will follow.

Seeing Eye Aids Dog Pal

Dallas, Oreg. (U.P.)—Probably the only dog that ever had a "seeing-eye dog" has been buried here. Buzzie, a blind Boston terrier, had the aid of Sportie, his seeing-eye dog companion. Buzzie, 14, could trot about town without difficulty.

Requiem Mass Set Today for J. V. Walsh

Requiem Mass for Joseph Vincent Walsh, 57, an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing examiner, will be said today at 10 a. m. in Holy Trinity Catholic Church. He died Monday at his home, 2456 39th st. nw. after a three months' illness.

A native of Somerville, Mass., Mr. Walsh was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1913. He came here the following year to join I. C. C.

He started work with the ICC as an engineer doing railroad valuation work. After receiving a law degree at Georgetown University Law School in 1925 he transferred first to the ICC's Bureau of Valuation and later to the finance division. He was appointed a hearing examiner last year.

Walsh leaves his wife, Valentina A. Walsh; a daughter, and son, Josephine and Edward, both living with their family, and a brother and sister, Miss Winifred and Dr. Lewis Walsh, both of Everett Mass.

Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Leonard S. Fenn

Mrs. Leonard S. Fenn, 49, wife of an employee of the Department of Agriculture, died after a long illness yesterday at her home, 5511 Oakmont ave., Bethesda, Md.

A native of Tarkia, Mo., Mrs. Fenn had lived in Maryland for five years. She was active in the affairs of the Delta Gamma sorority, and a former secretary of its national province. She was a member of the Methodish Church and the Order of the Eastern Star.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Fenn is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Hobbs of Payette, Idaho.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

On my way to the market this morning, I noticed a telephone truck parked in front of Jane Paul's house. I wasn't surprised when Jane called this afternoon to say she'd gotten her telephone.

She said she is on a party line, the same as I am. The telephone installer had explained that about seven out of every ten families with telephones are on party lines. Jane said if it weren't for party-line service, she would have had to wait a lot longer for her telephone.

That reminded me of something I was reading in the newspaper last night about the telephone company's construction and improvement program. The news article said that "in spite of the rapid progress being made on this program, some people are still waiting for telephones." It went on to say that "the company was making the widest possible use of party-line facilities because party lines mean more service for more people, sooner." The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company.

Will Return For Visits

Margaret Truman Moves To New York for Study

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE PRESIDENT'S daughter has said goodby to Washington for the time being and taken up residence in New York City. She is accompanied by Miss Reathel M. Odum, White House secretary, who will be with her for an indefinite stay. Miss Truman will be down for short visits on weekends and for special occasions.

In New York she will start her music studies next Monday with her teacher, Coenraad Bos, noted New York pianist. The latter is remembered at the White House over a period of many years. Since the time of President Theodore Roosevelt, he has accompanied great artists at various White House musicales.

While Miss Odum is in New York with Margaret, Mrs. Helm will take care of social activities at the White House unassisted. Extra mail, which always comes in when Margaret announces new plans for her career, is being attended to by staff members.

BECAUSE of the size of Blair House, Mrs. Truman has lessened her entertaining but not her activities. In the next two weeks she will be busy with many important engagements.

Today she will attend the reception which the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia is giving for the women members of Congress in the Carlton Hotel. Tomorrow she will attend the initial campaign luncheon of the National Symphony Orchestra in the ballroom at the Mayflower Hotel.

On Saturday Mrs. Truman will attend a tea to be given by the Missouri State Society for the wives of the congressional delegation from Missouri, at 2400 Hotel, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

The same day, in the late afternoon, Mrs. Truman will attend the private viewing of an exhibition of portraits by Greta Kempton at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. And on Monday, February 7, the First Lady will be a guest at the reception to be given at the Arts Club of Washington from 4 to 7 o'clock. The first autographed copy of Miss Bess Furman's book, "Washington By-Line," will be presented to Mrs. Truman at this time.

The following day, February 8, Mrs. Truman will attend the opening ceremony of the Washington World Affairs Center at 1712 H st., and cut the ribbon opening the center. The center is an outgrowth of the United Nations Forum, and is similar to the Cleveland World Affairs Council.

At 5 o'clock on February 8, Mrs. Truman will be presented with a typically dressed American doll by a committee of four persons. Mrs. Truman will present the doll to a permanent collection of authentically dressed dolls of all nations, held in trust by the Children's Museum of Washington and exhibited in the District of Columbia and in any State in the Union upon request.

The President and Mrs. Truman will attend a reception to be given in their honor by the Congressional Club on Wednesday, February 9. On Monday, February 14, the President and Mrs. Truman will attend the American Newspaper Women's Club ball at the Statler Hotel.

Dior Fashion Show to Aid Student Fund

Coming up on the spring social calendar is still another fashion show and luncheon to be given in the Shoreham Hotel Blue Room on Saturday, March 5, under the patronage of Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador. Proceeds from this showing of Christian Dior's new American collection will go to "Fonds de Solidarite Universitaire de France," an organization which aids needy French students.

Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, chairman of the benefit, announces the following patronesses for the show and luncheon, reservations for which Mrs. Russell G. Nicklin is now taking at 1733 Connecticut ave.:

Mrs. John W. Snyder, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Mrs. Almer Stillwell Monroney, Mrs. Rolla C. McMillan, Mrs. Arthur Barrows, Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mme. Draper Boncompagni, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Oscar C. Cox and Mrs. Raymond E. Cox.

Also Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. David Edward Finley, Mrs. Arthur Gardner, Mrs. Harry K. Hickey, Mrs. John J. McCloy, Mrs. George Mesta, Mrs. Curtis B. Munson and Mrs. George Y. Worthington, jr.

The show is being presented through the courtesy of Julius Garfinckel & Co. Door prizes and favors are among the features already planned by the committee.

Speaking Class to Meet At Mrs. Walker's House

Mrs. Harold Walker is loaning her house at 2339 S Street for the over-flow class in Effective Speaking beginning this morning at 10:30 a. m. Congressional and embassy wives and many others who could not attend the Tuesday class at the United Nations Club have signed up for Wednesday.

Reservations are being taken by Baroness von Schoen, 2126 Connecticut Avenue, telephone Michigan 1358.

To Avert National Suicide

Israel Must Hold Jerusalem, Negev, Pioneer Women Told

By Genevieve Reynolds

"No nation voluntarily commits suicide. That is why the new state of Israel must refuse to give up Negev and Jerusalem," declared Miss Dvorah Rothbard in an address last night at a public rally sponsored by the Washington Council of Pioneer Women, in the Annapolis Hotel.

Miss Rothbard, first emissary from Pioneer Women to Moatzat Hapoalot (Working Women's Council) in Israel, also served as a member of the Zionist Actions Committee when it sat in session to decide whether or not to proclaim the new state of Israel. She cast her vote in favor of the new state and was on hand to hear the proclamation issued May 14, 1948, in Tel Aviv. She returned to this country in November, 1948.

The speaker described the transformation of the arid, deserted areas of that region into a modern community. She said that trees had been planted for shade and citrus orchards cultivated that now are producing sufficient quantities for export.

Miss Rothbard said that the women of Israel helped to organize nurseries and kindergartens for the children, agricultural centers, industry and homemaking centers to help keep the economy going. "Immigrants and their children were trained in these centers," she explained.

Activities Expanded

In addition to working on the home front in an intensive rehabilitation program, the members of the Working Women's Council helped to mobilize women for training and active duty in the "Chen"—the Women's Corps of the Army of Israel, Haganah, according to Miss Rothbard. She pointed out that Moatzat Hapoalot or the Working Women's Council is a sister organization of the Pioneer Women in America and Canada, and in recent years has expanded its activities ot include children's homes, a home for refugee women.

"Israel's women are causing a revolution among the women of the Near East," she declared. "By working side by side as equal partners with the men in the war and in all aspects of the life of the new nation, they are shocking the less modern women of the area, many of whom still wear veils and are considered inferior to the men."

"The battle front is always near the homes of the people in the newly created State of Israel," explained Miss Rothbard. "In this small, close community, there are no unknown soldiers. Families all know each other."

Of all the 100,000 displaced persons who came to Israel from the camps of Europe, none are unemployed, according to the speaker, pointing out that 31 new settlements are being planned. "In a pioneer state there are plenty of jobs for everyone," she added.

Miss Rothbard emphasized that the help of all Jewry in the world would be required to make and keep Israel a self-supporting, self-sustaining, independent nation. Mrs. L. Greenzaid, program chairman, presented the speaker.

Grated onion, chopped parsley, salt and fresly ground pepper make an excellent seasoning combination for hamburgers. Serve with creamed potatoes.

A delicious dessert for Sunday dinner is quickly prepared from packaged vanilla ice cream plus a sauce of crushed pineapple flavored with a little mint.

Fresh pork tenderloin or veal cutlet may be used in making chop suey. If pork is chosen be sure to cook it thoroughly before adding the vegetables.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Died Recently, After Rearing Grandson As Her Own Child; Now His Mother Wants to Claim Him With Pride, But Lad Remains Aloof

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Almost 20 years ago, at the age of 15, I married a premedical student, 18, whose wealthy widowed mother forced us to part two months later, by threatening to disinherit the bridegroom—as she could under the terms of his father's will—unless he gave me up and resumed his studies.

I was so hurt that I let him go without letting him know I was having a baby, and my mother had the marriage quickly annulled. After the baby was born, my mother adopted him, sent me back to boarding school and pledged me to secrecy about the whole thing, as she feared boys would "make passes" at me if they knew.

The bridegroom had vowed he would return on his twenty-first birthday to marry me again; and true to his word, he did come back, but I refused him, whereupon he said he would remain single the rest of his life, and so far he has. Meantime he has become a prominent doctor, and six years ago I married Matt, a wonderful man, and we are very happy together.

Wants to Brag About "My Son"

WHEN I KNEW we were falling in love, I told Matt the whole story, which made no difference to him, as he was crazy about my son, whom I shall call Bill. A few months ago we lost my mother, and Matt and I see no reason to make a secret, any longer, of my true relationship to Bill. We are both very proud of him—an intelligent, attractive, very likable boy, now nearly 19.

I would like to be able to confide in my friends and brag about "my son," too, but Bill, although he seems to like me and is crazy about Matt, doesn't seem eager to accept me as his mother. He is affectionate in a detached sort of way, but he adored my mother and often says that nobody else could take her place.

She was wonderful, an old-fashioned woman who lived for the happiness and welfare of her children, and I can understand why Bill considered her ideal; but is there anything I can do to win his filial love, too, or should I let the matter drop? Please tell me what you think. There has been nothing sordid or shameful in our past, so he can't possibly fear a scandal. C. H.

Real Mother Missed Boat 20 Years Ago

DEAR C. H.: What is filial love but loyal gratitude, fueled by a pattern of memories and chain of experiences having to do with maternal devotion faithfully given, through thick and thin, in a child's helpless, defenceless, formative years?

Such is the feeling you have for your mother, who never failed you in emergency, as witness the way she patiently patched up your teen-age "smash" as best she could, and gave you back your youth almost good as new. And such is the feeling Bill has for her, too, with ample justification.

Taking this view of the situation, don't you see that you missed the boat with Bill, for you were mostly away at school during his infancy and early childhood, and saw him only during vacations and holidays, and then on a casual brother-sister basis, so far as he knew.

Better Not Prod Proud Adolescent

IT'S NOT surprising, but rather natural, that Bill shrinks from accepting you as mother, and especially now: 1. Because he is almost grown and disposed to quit apronstrings in any case. 2. Because your prideful desire to parade him as your own is subtly insensitive and presumptuous, coming so soon after his "ideal" mother's death; and as such is offensive to his spirit, causing him to stiffen toward you and miss her more poignantly than ever.

3. Because the mother he loved was elderly, whereas you are young enough to be his sister and until recently were billed as such in his scheme of things; and consequently he would feel like a fool saluting you filially. This last is a very important point. Proud, sensitive adolescents would almost rather die than cooperate in a course of action they consider "out of character" or that might consternate their friends.

For advice, it seems to me that in fairness to Bill you ought to respect his hesitancy, try to understand his reservations without questioning them, and digest your disappointment with good grace. In later years, he may be proud to hail you as mother; but for the present don't press him about it; and don't advertise the "real" relationship until he feels ready to acknowledge it, too. M. H.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

From time to time, the good old fairy stories on which many of us were brought up are attacked as harmful.

Those who oppose fairy stores believe that children should have more of the here-and-now kind of stories .. tales about the world around them. They propose that railroad engines, cranes, airplanes, the fireman and the policeman should be the heroes of our children rather than the Snow Queen, Prince Charming or other mythical characters.

And it is surely true that in the past there have not been enough stories of the interesting activities in life all around us. Within the last 25 years that lack has been remedied considerably.

On the other hand, it seems highly improbable that fairy stories are as harmful as some of their enemies believe them to be. Most children have little trouble in differentiating between the real and the fanciful. And they get something out of the imaginative fairy story that realistic tales don't bring. A balanced diet of all kinds of stories is likely to be most appreciated by the youngsters.

Ultramodern Statler Becomes Mecca of Antique Fanciers

By Lucia Brown

From the tall figurine in black brocade and jet beads at the door to the patchwork quilts on the wall, the mellow spell of age rests benignly on the Presidential Room at Hotel Statler this week.

A hundred thousand antiques, gathered from as far afield as China and as close to home as Georgetown, make the place a mecca for tradition-loving Washingtonians. Some exhibits date as far back as the twelfth century and the majority are over 100 years old.

Assembled for the sixth Washington Antiques Exposition from 55 different shops, the items are being shown under the sponsorship of the Children's Museum of Washington. The show will continue through Friday, with hours from 11 a. m. to 10:30 p. m.

Patrick Henry's soup tureen is one of the rare but "close to home" antiques in the show. It was used at Rose Hill, his Virginia plantation house and has rural scenes in blue on a white background. The Aldie, Va., antique shop is exhibiting it here.

From China comes the gentlemen's traveling case in the same collection. Made of wood, it fits together like a Chinese puzzle. Unfolded, it offers a sizable mirror, six tiny drawers and two secret panels for hiding valuables. Also from the Orient are the tiny figurines exhibited by two brothers from New York and the nest of six Chinese lacquered trays in a collection from Baltimore.

Eye-catcher in the New York group is a glass pitcher with a silver parrots' head and feet. Designed for serving either water or wine, it was made in Vienna. Also for use in holding potables are a pair of silver sea horses with detachable heads. They were made by a French craftsman 200 years ago.

Early American primitives are the specialty of a Ballerica, Mass., shop. Two primitive portraits painted on wood, a pine cobbler's bench, and an old-time blacksmith's sign advertising "Wheeler's Shoeing" are included in its collection. From a Pennsylvania shop come examples of "gaudy Dutch" china, a tulip pattern quilt stitched by a German housewife a century ago, and a hand-woven coverlet in blue, green, and red leaf design.

In contrast with this pioneer craftsmanship is the smooth gentility of the Heppelwhite, Sheraton, and Heppelwhite furniture brought over by a London firm for the show. Also included in its collection is a tiny replica of a bird in a gilded cage, whose music box with 2000 moving parts gives it the ability to chirp in charming canary style. Made in 1840, the little bird is still gayly turning its head from side to side as it sings.

Antique jewelry is also included in the exposition. One clever pin designed by a Roxbury, Mass., firm, combines a dozen old stick pins with a gold leaf in an attractive lapel ornament. Meerschaum pins, bas-relief affairs made of the same clay as meerschaum pipes, are 100-year-old items in the collection.

All the antiques in the exposition are for sale, at prices ranging from $1 to $3500. Mrs. John Freeman Brown is manager of the show.

by William Klemm—The Washington Post

MRS. PATRICK HURLEY, wife of the former Ambassador to China, pauses to admire a collection of French bisque at the Washington Antiques Exposition at Hotel Statler. These dainty china heads in pastel colors are over 100 years old. The little girl with the cat (at right in the collection) was in storage for almost 40 years, saw the light of day again when she was purchased by a Georgia ave. antique dealer here

Planned Parenthood Group Opens Annual Drive for Funds

THE Planned Parenthood Association of Washington is holding open house this month in connection with its annual fund-raising campaign which started yesterday and will run through the month of February.

The clinic and offices at 715 E st. sw. were officially open to the public Monday of this week, but interested people are welcome at any time during the association's office hours weekdays from 9 a. m. until 4 p. m.

The local group's campaign goal is $18,000, part of the national goal of one million dollars. A fee is charged for information and assistance at the clinic but it is a small sliding fee based on the patients' ability to pay. The money raised each year during the campaign is used to make up the difference between the association's income and its expenses.

The organization's aim, to build stronger and healthier families, is promoted by the dissemination of child spacing information, examination and treatment for infertility, and premarital and postmarital education in marriage and parenthood.

Patients are treated at the clinic by appointment only during both morning and evening hours. A branch clinic is located at Garfield Memorial Hospital.

Information on the work of the association may be obtained at the association's offices, where contributions may also be sent, or from the special campaign headquarters in the Westchester Apartments.

The board of trustees of the Washington Planned Parenthood Association include Mrs. Prentiss Willson, honorary president; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, president; Mrs. Russell E. Cunningham, secretary, and Mrs. Henry King, treasurer.

Spending As They Go

'You Can't Take It With You' Is Van Der Heggenses Credo

By Marie McNair

"YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU" is Van Der Heggen's philosophy, so they're spending as they go. In Washington for a week and staying at the Shoreham, the Van Der Heggens are bound for the Bahamas after a short visit with Col. Walter W. Abell 2d, at whose Baltimore home they were married three years ago.

As Muriel Bliss, daughter of Elmer J. Bliss and the late Mrs. Bliss, Mrs. Van Der Heggen made her debut both in Boston and Washington, still finds old friends in this transient city from her debutante days. Two children by a former marriage—Joseph M. Glasgow, jr., and Muriel Bliss Glasgow—live with their mother and stepfather at their 2000-acre Dunroving Ranch near Marthas Vineyard, Mass.

A Magnificent Estate

A magnificent estate with its own lake and swimming pool, Dunroving Ranch boasts a comfortable country house; a guest house converted from an old windmill; a stable turned into a clubhouse for Joseph, jr., who named it "Bit and Spur."

Over their broad acres the call of chuksr and Canadian geese is music to Van Der Heggen's ears. They raise them by the hundreds as a hobby and their friends call from all over the world to shoot.

During the early days of the war Mrs. Van Der Heggen worked for the fighting French and introduced Mlle. Denise Davey, now chairman of the national organization, American Aid to France. Dutch by birth, Mr. Van Der Heggen is the son of Count Van Der Heggen of Holland, but he gave up his own title when he became an American citizen some years ago.

TOWN TOPICS: You'd never think to look at demure little Mme. Esenbel, wife of the First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, that she was once the enfant terrible of Constantinople College.

Sailing the Bosphorus one day with her husband shortly after their marriage, Mr. Esenbel turned to his wife as they glimpsed the college dome: "Funny thing, but I don't remember that forest at the college." "Your wife planted that," was the reply. Then she went on to explain that in school for every misdemeanor pupils were required to plant a tree with her name and class engraved on the plaque attached. Mme. Esenbel, who admits that she cared for nothing by chemistry and biology in those days, was responsible for 48 trees!

Rites Today To Dedicate DAR Library

A new library of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be dedicated in a colorful ceremony, today, 3 p. m., in Memorial Continental Hall with Dr. Luther Evans, head of the Library of Congress, as principal speaker. The new library marks a milestone in the National Society's $900,000 building project now in full swing.

National officers, flanked by District of Columbia DAR pages carrying the District and State flags, will form a procession and march to the stage. A 20-minute concert by the Marine Band Orchestra will precede the program, which will include greetings by Dr. Wayne C. Grover, Archivist of the United States. Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, president general of the society, will preside and make the dedication address.

Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag will be led by Mrs. Furel Burn of North Manchester, Ind., State regent, and Miss Helen McMackin of Salem, Ill., chaplain, will give the invocation.

Those invited to the ceremonies include officials of the Pan American Union, the American Red Cross, and the DAR advisory board.

Mrs. Karl Mundt Learns—

In Trying to Cash a Check It Doesn't Help Very Much To Have a Man in the House

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

A NICE, legislatorily speaking, deflationary story is told by Mrs. Karl Mundt. Mrs. Mundt, as everyone knows, is wife of the freshman Senator from South Dakota, who until January 1st, served many years as Congressman. One day last autumn, right here in the Nation's Capital, Mrs. Mundt wished to pay for a purchase by check. Since she was unknown to the salesman she proffered, as identification, her House of Representatives Gallery Card.

"What's this?" he asked glancing at the card doubtfully. "My husband's in the House," explained Mrs. Mundt.

"Oh, I see! The House of David."

"No indeed," exclaimed Mrs. Mundt. "No . . . in January he'll be a Senator!"

"Well," said the clerk, eyeing the Congressman's wife with even greater skepticism, "that doesn't help a bit!"

More Ribbons for Vaughan

BEFORE LONG Maj. Gen. Harry Hawkins Vaughan, the President's Military Aide, is liable to be the most decorated man in miles around. And it's thanks to Drew Pearson that a flock of new ribbons is due to blossom on the general's broad chest. On a Sunday evening broadcast, we're told, the columnist announced he intended to personally picket and note names of those attending a reception at which the Argentine Ambassador will confer a decoration on Harry Vaughan. This flash proved so disturbing to our Latin-American neighbors that within a few hours General Vaughan was in line for at least three additional medals. The Mexican Ambassador telegraphed that his country intended to honor him with one of its highest orders. Two other South American Ambassadors wired they'd cable home for permission to confer decorations.

Traditional Compliment

THE STORY of Harry Vaughan's Argentine decoration was noted in this department some weeks ago. He first learned of its bestowal via an Associated Press dispatch printed in the local gazettes.

Since the President of the United States may not accept foreign decorations, it has long been traditional, as sort of a left-handed compliment, to scatter medals among members of his staff. Refusal, therefore, is out of question but, since last July, none of these honors may be accepted without the permission of Congress. To cap the to-do, General Vaughan has never been in Argentina, not has he done the Argentine any favors.

Friday afternoon's reception, which started as a small, intimate "do" has now burgeoned into an all-out affair with most Latin Americans hereabouts clamoring for invitations. While Mr. Pearson pickets outside, this purely objective reporter will be snug inside, comfortably counting noses and, we hope, sipping that very pleasant Argentine champagne!

Cook's Discovery

THOUGH THE local press went to town on Lilly Windsor, whose singing pleased so many last night at Constitution Hall, there are a few amusing and as yet unmentioned highlights in her brief career. The extraordinary talent of this young daughter of a Hawthorne, N. Y. grocer came to light through the determined efforts of her present manager's cook. Impresario Vincent's Cordon Bleu left the Vincents to work as cleaning woman in the New York Daily News Building, heard Lilly somewhere along the way, badgered her former employer into giving la Windsor an audition. The day Lilly signed her first contract, her humble angel died.

Lilly, who had been getting $3 for singing at funerals, was sent to Italy, became the first American in over thirty years to be engaged by the Rome Opera, and further distinguished herself by refusing to adopt a possibly more mellifluous foreign name.

On the side, she sang at benefits to aid the children in St. Michael's Orphanage, ended up by adopting all 800 of them. She doesn't take the kids with her, of course, but sees that their simple needs are taken care of. She's the most unusual diva, for although few have achieved such acclaim at tender age, Lilly doesn't take herself seriously, kids everyone, including the press, with wicked skill.

How to Clean Diamond

I would like to know the best method for cleaning a diamond ring at home. F. W.

Brushing the ring with a soft brush and soapy water to which ammonia has been added will brighten it. I do not recommend that you try to remove any soil which has become imbedded under the setting. That might loosen the stone. Once a year, it is good insurance to have your diamond ring cleaned professionally and, at the same time, have the jeweler check the stones in the setting to be sure they are secure.

The baby put several crayon marks on a phonograph record. As we have a permanent-type needle, I don't want to risk ruining it by running it through the crayon. How can I remove the wax from the record. M. McL.

Sponge the record with carbon tetrachloride or with one of the record cleaners sold by record shops. Use a very soft cloth and as little pressure as possible. Turn the cloth frequently to a fresh, moistened spot to completely remove the wax.

Here is a recipe for Macaroon Cup Cake, sent in response to a request from one of your readers.

Macaroon Cup Cakes

Sift 1 level teaspoon baking powder and 1 cup flour into 2 well-beaten eggs. Add 2 tablespoons water and 1 can of macaroon mix. Blend thoroughly and pour into paper cups in a muffin pan. Fill half full. Bake at 350 degrees until light brown, about 25 to 30 minutes. This makes 24 cup cakes 2½ inches across. G. E. K.

Where can I purchase felt pennants such as college boys use to decorate their rooms? I am chiefly interested in getting both an Air Corps pennant and a Navy pennant. J. R.

Some of the sport shops sell pennants but of those I phoned, not one had pennants for either Navy or Air Corps or have they ever had any. If you are wishing to complete a collection, possibly you would consider having them made to order. Two firms which make banners, etc., to order are listed under "Embroidery" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

We gave a party New Years Eve and used red candles to decorate a table covered with a handsome embroidered linen cloth. The red wax spattered the cloth and the wallpaper. I scraped some of the wax off but it left a red stain on the cloth and wallpaper. Can you tell me what I can do to remove the red stains? A. W. F.

Sponging with a solution of one part denatured alcohol to two parts water should remove the colored stain. If it proves stubborn, dampen spot with water, then rub in powdered sodium perborate (obtainable at drug stores). Let stand a minute or two then rinse well in clear water.

Having noticed two questions in your column recently about washing diapers, may I recommend that interested people read "Baby and Child Care," by Dr. Benjamin Sprock, an inexpensive but authoritative book obtainable in most drug stores. It goes into detail about washing diapers, also preventing rash. Of particular interest are pages 101 and 122. R. W.

I have been given a quantity of feed bags which I'm sure can be used to good advantage if I knew what to do with them. Do you know of a book or pamphlet which can give me ideas for their use? N. L. H.

The National Cotton Council has issued such a booklet. I believe you can obtain a copy by writing this council in Memphis, Tenn.

To Mrs. F. C. R.: Here is a suggestion for removing odor from car. I had a similar problem and used the deodorant with the wick in the bottle that contains chlorophyl. Sprinkle a little on the upholstery, then close windows and leave the bottle open in the car for a few hours. M. G.

Can you tell me how to remove spots from a beige wool topcoat? I carried evergreen branches for Christmas decorations and evidently pitch exuded from the cut branches. A READER.

It might be wisest to turn the job over to an expert cleaner, after explaining to him what caused the spots. However, if you wish to try removing the spots at home, here are a couple of suggestions. (1) Rub the stains with ice to harden (if they are the gummy type that stands out on the surface of the coat). Then crack and rub the hardened gum out of the material. (2) Rub the spots with lard or petroleum jelly, leave several hours to soften, then sponge with carbon tetrachloride or some other reliable cleaning fluid. Be sure to put a pad under the spots when sponging and get out all the greasy softener, as well as the stains.

Exercise Lazy Tricep Muscles To Beautify Upper Arms

By Ida Jean Kain

ROLL UP YOUR sleeves and take up the slack in upper arm muscles. Work won't do it, not even hard work, unless the muscle action is in the groove . . . so apply the science of muscular movement.

The back of the upper arm is a dead area, muscularly speaking, because these muscles, the triceps, work only in certain positions and movements. Unused muscles get flabby, and when fat is added to soft muscles they sag sadly. Ah, the pity of it all.

Inside information on the way muscles work reveals that the triceps are used only when the arms are more level than perpendicular, or when there is force behind a blow. Naturally we don't go around putting force behind a blow or holding the arms out shoulder level either.

Much of the work done with the arms by-passes these muscles. If you've never taken this action test, try it. Pick up a pail full of water and carry it down at the side in one hand. It would seem that lifting something heavy would be bound to use all the arm muscles. But with the other hand, feel the spot that tends to sag on the back of the upper arm—the one that's working. There is very little contraction there—the work is being done by the biceps on the front of the arms and by the muscles of the forearm.

Any muscular motion that involves extending the arms with force, such as mowing the lawn, driving nails or shoveling, brings the triceps forcibly into action. Arm beautifying exercises must extend the elbow forcibly, or move the arms near shoulder level.

The following exercise routine is in the groove . . .

Holding arms out at shoulder level, tensing muscles, wave arms up and down, keeping the range of movement just below and just above shoulder level. Then make small circles with the arms, 10 counts in one direction, 10 in the other. Again keep the range of motion small . . . wide circles would miss the muscles.

A round or two of shadow-boxing will help knock out the sag. Punch away at your shadow on the wall—hard punches that forcibly extend the elbow. Or punch at an old pillow suspended in doorway, shoulder height.

High in Protein, Low in Fat, Fish Is Ideal Food for Dieters

Fish is excellent food for dieters. High in needed protein it is an exceptional source of thiamin, riboflavin and nicotinic acid, as well as of all the major minerals—iron, copper, magnesium, iodine, calcium and phosphorus. Add to this its low fat content and you have just what the cosmetician, as well as the doctor, ordered. The short cooking period required for fish, its relatively low price and its year-round availability are just further gildings of the lily. Although butter has a natural affinity to all seafood, a smidgeon will suffice, enhanced flavoring being attained by adding herbs and spices.

Neptune Nonsense

½ pound shrimp, cooked
3 stalks celery
½ green pepper
4 hard-cooked eggs
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
¼ teaspoon onion juice
1 envelope plain gelatin
1 teaspoon salt
Pinch of pepper
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
4 teaspoons lemon juice
Chili sauce

Put scallops in small kettle with 1 cup slightly salted water and cook about 10 minutes; cool. Grind shrimp, scallops eggs, celery and green pepper. Measure liquid from scallops, adding water if necessary to make 1 cup. Soften gelatin in ¼ cup liquid, then dissolve in remaining liquid, heated. Cool, season and combine all ingredients. Pour into ring mold and place in refrigerator to set. Unmold and garnish with lemon slices and water cress. Serve with chili sauce. Yield: 6 portions.

Fillet Cordon Bleu

¼ cup melted butter or margarine.
1 small can asparagus tips with liquid.
⅛ teaspoon white pepper.
1 tablespoon anchovy paste.
1 teaspoon capers.
1 teaspoon chopped parsley.
1 egg yolk, well beaten.

Brush flounder fillets with melted butter; place a few asparagus tips on each fillet, roll and fasten with toothpicks. Place in well buttered pan. Season with white pepper, add wine and ½ cup asparagus liquid and bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Remove fish rolls to hot serving dish and remove toothpicks. Blend anchovy paste with liquid in pan; add capers and parsley and bring to a boil. Pour in a thin stream over well beaten egg yolk, stirring constantly. Pour over fish. Approximate yield: 4 portions.

Keep Child At Home if He Has Cold

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It's inevitable that in the colder weather children will have numerous colds. Babies get frequent colds until they build up some immunity to them. Then they should not have a cold oftener than every six weeks, if then.

Once a child has reached school age, he is driven into intimate contact with other children who have been sent to school with "little" colds. How this child will react to that germ is entirely an individual matter and he may become a very sick child, though the other child was able to be about and seemed unaffected.

It is good sense and good manners to keep colds at home. As soon as the child complains of a dry, sore throat, usually the first symptom, keep him at home. Usually within a day he will develop chilliness, sneezing and a runny nose. From that moment he is better off in bed, even if he isn't sick. The temperature of the bedroom can be kept stable; he will stay warmer, be more comfortable, and get over his cold more quickly if he remains inactive.

Feed him lots of fruits and stuff him with fluids, water, soup, lemonade, ginger ale, any soft drink he will take willingly.

If he needs medication, then let the doctor advise it and don't use nose drops without being told to do so and given instructions how to administer them.

Almost every children's disease starts with what looks like a common cold, so that for the sake of the child himself the parent should be wary about sending him off until she is certain he cannot jeopardize himself or pass on his ailment to the innocent bystander. A day or two in bed will hasten the demise of a real cold and show up any other ailment for what it is.

One on the Aisle—

Elegant Spoofing By Bob and Jane

By Richard L. Coe

"THE PALEFACE," the Bobe Hope-"Buttons and Bows"-Jane Russell comedy at the Palace, is a honey. Go.

Apart from allowing Bob to make like twentieth century in Indian Territory of the last, this also turns out to be a neat spoof of all those Westerns we've been seeing lately. It's a lavish joke, neatly done up in the Technicolor which decks the lavish productions Westerns have been getting lately.

The story whipped up by Ed Hartmann and Frank Tashlin is in the best tradition of poking fun. They've imagined Bob as an ineffectual frontier dentist who gets a reputation as a daring guy by the most absurd accidents. One of these accidents is Jane Russell and, by golly, the girl's a neat comic.

Jane plays Calamity Jane to Bob's bashful dentist. The Governor has her abducted from jail to track down the villain who's giving ammunition to the Indians. Jane doesn't like this too much, but to save her hide she wades into it and Bob with grim disdain.

Most of the fun happens near the Dirty Shame Saloon, where Bob picks a fight with the last man in the world he should, but thanks to Calamity Jane's trigger finger, he wins out. I'm not going into plot or gags any further. Just see it and relax.

There's a neat handling to the celebrated "Buttons and Bows," which evidently didn't impress the makers as being the sort of thing that would sweep the land the way it has.

Bill Gold Will Like

You just get Bob, hunched in the front of a covered wagon, twanging away at this in pure burlesque style, as sharp a caricature of all those Western songs as one can wish. He does his own accompaniment on an amusing squeeze box, a matter that will appeal mightily to Bill Gold, who's often condemned the 300-piece orchestras a song in the desert sometimes commands. It's done lightly as part of the plot, and when the song's over you find the wagon trail is all snarled up.

Jane's utter disdain for Bob's helplessness is grand fun. We can now forgive Jane for "The Young Widow," her only other picture seen downtown after all that confusion about the well-publicized "Outlaw."

The Palace short subjects are long on news and also include a rather pallid trip to some of England's private "public" schools under the insipid direction of Mr. Fitzpatrick.

But Bob and Jane in "The Paleface" will make you happy.

THE PAYHOUSE opens a new one today, "Don't Take It to Heart." . . . With Richard Greene in the lead, this one was the surprise opening of Christmas week in New York . . . The uptown Beacon was the only spot the comedy could get a booking and, by gosh, the reviewers found they'd located one of those "sleepers" . . . They were aloof about some of the holiday specials, but this one found them delighted.

LEO BRADY'S newest comedy, "Grandstand Play" will be Catholic University's next, opening a two-week run Friday, February 11 . . . It's the story of a baseball rookie who won't cooperate with sportsdom's strictures on a player's private life . . . Bill Callahan gets the lead, with Phil Bosco, Jill Leahy and Rosemarie Busolitz in the top supporting roles . . . The author will direct.

SUNDAY'S COLUMN urging entertainers for hospital shows brought several calls on the American Theater Wing's Washington Hospital Committee . . . In case you've forgotten, Mrs. May Redmond Smith is the lady you call at DUpont 0381 or 0382.

"THE PALEFACE," Paramount release produced by Robert L. Welch. Screen play by Edmund Hartmann and Frank Tashlin, with additional dialogue by Jack Rose. Songs by Jay Livingston and Ray Evans. Photographed in technicolor by Ray Rennahan. Directed by Norman Z. McLeod. At the Palace.

WHAT'S MORE, IT'S ALL GOOD—Bob Hope and Jane Russell in their rollicking comedy about the Old West, "The Paleface," which arrived yesterday at the Palace

Dr. Sigmund Spaeth to Speak At Book and Author Luncheon

Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, one of the speakers at the February 9 Book and Author Luncheon sponsored by The Washington Post, will deliver his talk while seated at a piano.

Spaeth

Through this technique, Dr. Spaeth has found he can better interest the layman in music.

He is radio's "Tune Detectective" and has served as music critic for various newspapers and magazines. He has written 21 books on music, ranging from the popular "Barber Shop Ballads" to the scholarly "Guide to Great Orchestral Music."

David Bradley, author of "No Place to Hide"; Sterling North, author of "So Dear to My Heart," and Ernestine Gilbreth Carey, co-author with her brother of "Cheaper by the Dozen," will also speak at the luncheon.

The luncheon will be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel on Wednesday, February 9, at 1 p. m. Tickets may be purchased in the book departments of Kann's and Woodward & Lothrop, or at any of these book stores: Airport Book Shop, Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Francis Scott Key, David Pearlman, Paul Pearlman, Pursell's, Savile's, Whyte's, Community and Better Mouse Trap.

Britain Reported Seeking Islands In South Seas

London, Feb. 1 (U.P.)—Britain may be about to buy a South Seas kingdom, "The Island of Heavenly Footstep," and others in the Cocos group.

The Cocos Islands or Keeling group, about 700 miles southwest of Java, have been ruled by the Scottish family Clunies-Ross since 1866 when they were ceded to the family "forever" by Queen Victoria.

A Colonial Office spokesman would say only that talks are under way in Singapore on "various financial matters connected with the wartime military occupation of the Cocos Islands."

Recently, Australia and New Zealand agreed to acquire neighboring Christmas Island in the Indian Ocean for 11 million dollars.

Hotel Blaze Takes One Life; Hot Embers Balk Hunt for Five

Ripon, Wisc., Feb. 1 (U.P.)—A flash fire took at least one life today and left the 75-year-old Grand View Hotel a pile of embers so hot a search for the bodies of five more missing persons had to be postponed until Wednesday.

One of the victims was believed to be Lloyd Wasserbach, former University of Wisconsin football star and a player for two years with the Chicago Rockets of the All-America Conference.

Most of the 48 guests fled in nightclothes into near-zero weather when the blaze swept through the three-story structure.

Officials gave a list of missing as Albert Bleich, 60, Madison; Lloyd Wasserbach, 27, Madison; Robert Wingler, 32, Iowa City, Iowa; Charles Wendlandt, 70; Clara Salverson, 60, and Alice Callen, 60, all of Ripon.

The hotel, a landmark on the town square, burned virtually to the ground despite efforts of firemen from nearby Fond du Lac, Berlin, Princeton and Oshkosh.

Staff of District Committee Ignores Office Ouster Threat

Senate District Committee staff members went about their duties yesterday with their office doors open, despite a threat to oust them from one of the two adjoining committee rooms in the Capitol.

Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), chairman of the Senate Rules Committee, was understood to be seeking one of the rooms for use of the Senate sergeant at arms, Joseph Duke, and his staff.

District Committee staff members were keeping the room, pending return of Senate District Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) to the Capitol on February 7.

The room at issue is in the northeast corner of the Capitol's Senate wing, on the second floor.

Duke said he had no special desire for that particular room, but does need more office space.

FDIC Acts in Indiana Bank Defalcations

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation announced last night it has arranged to have "all deposits" of the First National Bank of Dyer, Ind., taken over by the Gary National Bank, Gary, Ind., and "depositors . . . are fully protected."

The First National Bank of Dyer, the agency announced, "has been under surveillance by the Comptroller of the Currency because of sizable defalcations by its cashier." The agency did not identify the cashier.

Maple T. Harl, chairman of the FDIC, said the FDIC has authorized an initial advance of one million dollars to facilitate the absorption of the Dyer bank by the Gary National, which has 75 million in resources.

Postlude

Lilly Windsor Has Voice of Good Quality

By Paul Hume

Lilly Windsor made her much heralded Washington debut last night in customary Constitution Hall.

The heralding had plenty to merit it in the way of good solid singing. Miss Windsor who was born and brought up in Hawthorne, N. J., has a voice of good quality, good training and comes out with good style.

At her age, and she is still a child as far as singers go, Miss Windsor has an excellent start. At present we find her a far more persuasive singer of songs than of opera, and unfortunately, much more understandable in German and Italian than in her native English.

In unfamiliar songs of Mendelssohn, familiar music of Brahms, and even in much of Agatha's aria from Weber's Freischultz, Miss Windsor was at home, and sounded well. In Mozart she moves with easy agility and good style. Her opening Handel aria no doubt suffered from nerves.

French songs and last night's singer are strangers and must remain so as long as her present tone production is maintained. Her English can only be comprehended on the grounds of a language approached as a strange tongue, rather than in terms of the first language she heard and understood.

Much of the difficulty in Handel, French and English stems from the same cause: a fundamentally incorrect system of attacking tones. A glottal approach to many initial notes makes Miss Windsor's tone darker than it ought to be places many of her tones farther back in the throat than is wise, and gives a heaviness to much of her work.

Her feeling for singing is excellent—much of her natural inclination is right, and her voice, though not essentially beautiful, is capable of exciting moments. Lilly Windsor can become a very good singer of either opera or songs if she will proceed cautiously, remove certain defects now hampering her, and greatly enlarge her rather standard repertoire.

Her audience was increasingly enthusiastic, and received Mimi's Farewell, and the Schubert Ave Maria for their plaudits. It was especially good to hear Paul Meyer's excellent accompaniments once again.

4 Sergeants Sit 1st Time in U. S. Court Martial

Heidelberg, Germany, Feb. 1 (AP). Four sergeants took their places beside six officers on a military court for the first time in United States history today, to try two soldiers on a charge of murder.

The accused, Pfc. Andrew D. Brd, 31, of Orlando, Fla., and Pfc. Oscar R. Gannon, 24, of Hanging Rock, Ohio, chose to have the enlisted men on the court under a new rule which went into effect today. They pleaded innocent to "premeditated murder" of one German civilian and assault on another in a brawl on December 31.

Two of the sergeants, Fred A. McFaul, Washington, D. C., and Ralph A. Rosch, Broadlands, Ill., have had no previous court experience of any kind. One, Alfred P. Rodriguez, Evansville, Ind., was a wartime first lieutenant and served on courts-martial. The other, Abram B. Cohen, Bloomingdale, Ga., had served on civilian juries.

Camp Pickett's Use as Air Base To Be Discussed

By The Associated Press

An Air Force official will be sent to Blackstone Saturday to discuss with town officials possible use of Camp Pickett by the Air Force.

The conference has been arranged by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), to whom a Virginia delegation recently complained against announced plans by the Army for closing the 45,000-man camp near Blackstone.

Byrd said today Air Secretary Stuart Syming n had agreed to send an aide, Maj. Gen. Grandison Gardner, to talk with town officials. The possibility of the camp's being used as an Air Force base was raised at a recent conference between the protesting delegation, Senator Byrd and representatives of the military.

Blackstone officials have argued they spent about one million dollars for housing and other facilities in the belief Camp Pickett would remain open.

X-1 Has Flown At 850 M. P. H., Air Force Says

By The Associated Press

Government officials acknowledged yesterday that the Air Force's tiny "faster-than-sound" test plane has flown faster than 850 miles an hour and reached an altitude above 40,000 feet.

Just how much faster than 850 miles and just how high the little X-1 rocket-powered ship has flown still is wrapped in the tightest secrecy. Unofficial information is that its best speed has been around 1000 miles an hour and its best altitude somethin, more than 60,000 feet. At 60,000 feet the speed of sound is 660 miles per hour.

Officials merely said the manpiloted craft has reached more than half way toward the goals of 1700 miles an hour and 80,000 feet altitude for which it was designed.

Finland Given Approval for U. S. Isotopes

By Carl Levin
NYHT News Service

Finland, Soviet Russia's Northwestern neighbor, has been notified by the State Department that she has been approved to receive radioactive isotopes from the Atomic Energy Commission, it was learned yesterday.

Formal notification of the approval, making Finland the twenty-sixth foreign country to qualify but the first in eastern Europe, was sent to the Finnish Legation here in a letter dated January 26.

The application stated that Finland's only prior source of isotopes, used for medical research, has been the Nobel Institute of Physics in Stockholm, from which she received three small consignments. Sweden herself is one of the largest foreign users of AEC isotopes.

In qualifying to participate in the isotope output of the AEC piles at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Finland met the standard qualifications imposed upon all countries seeking isotopes here. These include agreement to report fully to the AEC on work done with the isotopes and to permit qualified foreign scientists to inspect the recipient country's use of the radio-active material.

Failure to agree to these terms resulted a year ago in the breaking off of negotiations through which Czechoslovakia sought to obtain isotopes.

Grand Jury Indicts Six At Rockville

Six indictments involving charges of murder, rape and jailbreak were returned yesterday by the Montgomery County grand jury at Rockville, Md.

David Allen Hamlet, 28, a laborer, was indicted on charges of rape, assault with intent to rape, carnal knowledge and assault and and battery in connection with an attack on the 9-year-old daughter of a Silver Spring family with whom he boarded. The alleged attack occurred November 5.

Paul Theodore Kratzmaier, 39, 1420 21st st. nw., an automobile salesman, also was indicted on rape charges in connection with an attack upon a 31-year-old Government clerk December 12. The attack allegedly took place in Chevy Chase in his midget automobile while he was taking her home from a dance in Washington.

Ernest Turner, 26, was indicted on charges of murder in the shotgun slaying of his brother, Harold, 22, January 8 at their home in Boyds, Md.

Indictments charging three men with jailbreak were returned as the result of an attempt to escape from Rockville Jail November 5. The trio was recaptured on the courthouse roof after they pried two bars from a jail window.

They are: Albert Lamb, 28, of Washington, and Paul R. Dunagan, 23, Glen Echo Heights, Md., both now serving seven-year sentences in the Maryland Penitentiary for house-breaking and larceny, and Thomas S. Carter, 21, of Montrose, Md., who was given a suspended sentence of two years after his conviction on larceny charges.

Eisenhower Book To Be Televised, Starting in March

New York, Feb. 1 (U.P.)—World War II as seen through the eyes of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in his book "Crusade in Europe" will be televised by the American Broadcasting Co. in 26 weekly half-hour installments in March, the network announced today.

The series will be filmed by Twentieth Century Fox, who bought the screen rights to Eisenhower's book from Doubleday & Co., in cooperation with the March of Time.

The series will use films from the libraries of the Army, Navy and Coast Guard, the Alien Property Custodian, the British War Office, Canadian National Film Board, March of Time and Twentieth Century Fox. New pictures shot in Europe and the United States will tie the official war films into a smooth documentary picture.

Area Inventors Urged to Form Corporation

The assembly call for Washington area inventors to band together in a nonprofit corporation was issued here yesterday by the newly-formed National Society of Inventors, Inc.

First public meeting of the society, it was announced, is scheduled to be held at 8 p. m. Thursday at the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

White Pupils Walk Out in Race Protest

East St. Louis, Ill., Feb. 1 (U.P.)—The Rock Junior High School here was closed today when about 400 white pupils walked out of classes when they learned Negro children were in the building attempting to enroll.

Small groups of students at East St. Louis High School also walked out of classes when six Negroes renewed attempts to enroll there. Classes, however, were not interrupted.

Ten Negro children, accompanied by adults, walked into the Rock school before classes began and were seated in a vacant classroom. The pupils, accompanied by scores of parents, immediately walked out and many of them, carrying signs urging the Negroes out, paraded around the school.

Two squads of police were on hand to keep order. The Negroes remained in the classroom.

The attempt to enroll the Negroes at three East St. Louis public schools, now restricted to whites, began yesterday when groups of them tried to register but were turned down. Miss Bernice Goedde, president of the board of education, said the policy of segregation would continue.

William Jones, Negro attorney, said Illinois law makes no provision for segregation in public schools and he would seek a writ of mandamus in Circuit Court to force enrollment of the Negroes.

Falls Church Charter to Be Revised Soon

The Falls Church City Council has agreed to hire an expert to revise or completely redraft its city charter for action by the Virginia General Assembly.

If the Assembly holds a special session this year, the Council said it would appropriate $600 to have the present charter amended.

But if the special session is not held, the council agreed to spend $1700 to have a complete new charter written for presentation to the Assembly in its regular session in 1950.

In either case, the Falls Church body, on the recommendation of its charter committee, decided to ask Dr. Roland Eggers, of the University of Virginia's bureau of public administration, to revise the charter.

In its meeting Tuesday night, the city council agreed to meet next Monday with the board of directors of the Falls Church Teen Canteen to discuss policies and the future of the youth recreation club.

The city underwrote the bulk of the money used to build and equip the Teen Canteen, located on Hillwood ave. at Douglas st.

Court costs in the city's police Court were inereased from $3 to $4.50 by the council during its meeting in the City Hall.

Argentina Bars Imports

Buenos Aires, Feb. 1 (AP).—Argentina today banned transfers of money abroad and the importing of foreign goods, while she takes stock of her financial resources.

[Banking circles in New York said Argentine gold and foreign currency holdings have dwindled.]

All pending applications for permits were cancelled. Permits issued but still unused were ordered returned.

Surprisingly, the order applies even to soft currencies. Argentina's chief concern until now has been to protect her hard currencies, including United States dollars, Swiss and Belgian francs, Uruguayan pesos, Portuguese escudos and Swedish kroner. The order also applies to British sterling, French francs, Italian lire and Spanish pesetas.

Private bankers said they thought the ban would be in force at least a week.

Peronists Soften Plan For Forced Citizenship

Buenos Aires, Feb. 1 (U.P.)—The Peronist majority of the Constituent Assembly today abandoned a proposed constitutional amendment that would have compelled foreigners to become naturalized Argentines after a two-year residence, or leave the country.

Instead, President Juan D. Peron's party proposed another amendment that would give new arrivals the option of becoming citizens automatically after a five-year residence, or declaring their desire to retain their original nationality. In the latter case, they would not be required to leave the country.

Spurned Girl Fails to Poison Veterinary But His Dog Dies

Akron, Ohio, Feb. 1 (AP).—A 23-year-old receptionist tried to poison one of the staff physicians at the Akron Veterinary Hospital.

The only fatality was the man's dog, police announced. They charged the girl, Marilyn Stevenson of Copley, Ohio, with administering poison. She was freed under $1000 bond pending a hearing next week.

Police Capt. John Struzenski, piecing together signed statements from Dr. Charles F. Jones, 36, and Miss Stevenson, told the story this way:

For the past two years, Dr. Jones had been irregularly "dating" the receptionist. Angered because he refused to divorce his wife, she broke into Jones' home Thursday night. She put poison into a bottle of milk, smashed a figurine, burned his wife's nightgown and some baby clothes.

When Jones got home, he poured himself a glass of milk and gave his dog some from the same bottle. Jones, noticing a peculiar taste, spit his out. The dog died.

As for the girl, Struzenski quoted her as follows:

"I didn't want to kill him, I only wanted to hurt him as I had been hurt. I just wanted to make him sick."

Dr. Jones told police he had wanted to break off with the girl seven months ago, when his wife became pregnant.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Our Parking Troubles Are Almost Over

Now that our photographers have "parked" a helicopter alongside the top of the Washington Monument while they snapped their pictures, I think I am on the verge of solving our traffic problems.

We could all shift to helicopters, and find plenty of parking space for them, in the limitless sky. Commuting from "parking lot" to office could be accomplished by use of parachutes.

All I have to figure out now is how we'd get back to our vehicles at the end of the day.

THAT CLINCHES IT

John C. Uehlinger of Quarters R, U. S. Naval Gun Factory is also a student at George Washington University—and is therefore in a position to corroborate our recent statements about ginkgo trees.

He says his botany textbook makes everything plain as day, like this:

"In Cycas, Zamia and other genera of the Cycadales as well as in Ginkgo biloba, the only living species of the Ginkgoales, the male gametes have cilia and are motile like the sperms of the Pteridophyta and Bryophyta. Ginkgo is dioecious, and the microsporophylls and megasporophylls are much reduced, and not leaf-like."

See? Didn't I tell you they weren't leaf-like?

GROUNDHOG DAY

I've got mah trusty shootin' arn
A rope, 'n snickersnee.
I've got mahself beside the hole
Ez ca'm ez I kin be.

When thet dang critter shows hisself
Ya needn't feel no doubt
We'll hev some groundhog barbecue:
That varmint's STAYIN' out.

MISCELLANY

In the 12 years I've been hanging around radio stations, I've never encountered more than two standard speeds for "phonograph" turntables—78 r.p.m. for regular records, and 33 r.p.m. for transcriptions and more recently, LP (long-playing) records. The introduction of the new 45 r.p.m. speed, calling for the purchase of still another type of turntable, will cost consumers untold thousands of dollars . . . The Agriculture Choristers are taking applications from Government-employed (non-professional) singers and instrumentalists, for use in a show next month. Applications must be received by Saturday in the Activities Office, Room 1011 South Agriculture Building, or call Mr. Powers at Republic 4142, extension 5422 . . . Another streetcar token for Children's Hospital turns up as a result of a housecleaning at the M. A. Leese office . . . Mrs. William Gouverneur Barnewall, hurrying along the wet sidewalk the other day, somehow managed (as haven't we all) to spill all the coins out of her change purse. An anonymous gallant rounded them all up for her, tipped his hat, and went his way . . . A friend who lives in Alexandria is still chuckling about her recent experience at the railroad station there. She was told that an evening train leaves Washington for Alexandria at 19 minutes to 5, and thought that might be a good way to come home after the Inaugural parade. To check, she asked for confirmation at the Alexandria depot—but after much searching of schedules the clerk shook his head and said: "There seems to be some mistake. There's nothing leaving Washington for here around that time except at 4:50."

GREASING THE SKIS

E. J. Shafer of 4718 N. 20th rd., Arlington, Va., wonders how our afternoon contemporary meant for us to pronounce the word "gready" in the sentence:

"Three of these resorts spent about one million dollars last summer gettin gready for a big skiing season this winter."

PROGRESS REPORT

District Liners who are wondering how Pete Dickerson is making out on his trip to the West Coast may be interested in this postcard which has just arrived from Elko, Nev.

"These last four days on Highway 40, between Denver and here, have fitted me for Admiral Byrd's next trip to the South Pole.

"I've seen nothing but subzero temperatures, a hemisphere of ice and snow, evil colored skies—and of course a blow-out while going down a mountain grade.

"I'm going to erect a monument to myself in Reno: a face showing pained surprise, peering out through an icy windshield."

VAGRANT THOUGHT

It never used to snow this much when the Republicans were in power.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

NEW YORK.—Sir Carl Berendsen, the New Zealand Ambassador to Washington, sat with a group of diplomats who were discussing the state of the world. "I can sum up the present world situation in only one sentence," said Ambassador Berendsen, and offered the sentence: "There are burglars in the joint—and there ain't any cops."

Buddy de Sylva, the movie producer, and Jules Glaenzer of Cartier's, were told by Laddie Sanford that he had a horse entered in the Grand National. They sailed to Europe, bet $100 on Sanford's horse, went to see the Grand National and shouted loudly for their choice. A man standing next to them calmly said: "You two are rather noisy, eh, what?" . . . "Well, we're both a long way from home, and we got $100 on this horse," Glaenzer explained . . . "Where are you from?" asked the man . . . "America," said de Sylva . . . "I'm from Australia," said the man, calmly, "and I bet $200 on the horse."

Dan Golenpaul invited Charles P. Taft to write the article on Religion, for the "Information Please Almanac." Taft is president of the Federal Council of Churches. When the proofs came back from the printer, Golenpaul found that the by-line had been changed to "Robert A. Taft," the Senator, who is Charles' brother . . . Golenpaul corrected it by writing over it, "For God's Sake—Charles P. Taft" . . . The corrected proof came back from the printer, with the title, "For God's Sake, by Charles P. Taft."

On February 25 Dr. A. H. Feller, counsel to the United Nations, will leave for The Hague to appear at the World Court. Dr. Feller will argue for reparations in behalf of the U. N. representatives who lost their lives during the fighting in Palestine. The reparations will come from Israel, Egypt, Trans-Jordan and the other nations involved in the fighting. Dr. Feller is the first American to appear before the new World Court . . . He also was the first and only American to appear before the old World Court, when he went there to argue the Austro-German Customs Union case.

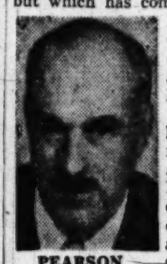
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Merci Train on Diplomacy Track

By Drew Pearson

One of the famous names of France is "Quai d'Orsay" which actually means "Dock of Orsay," but which has come to mean the French Foreign Office, because of its location alongside the Dock of Orsay.



PEARSON

Almost unknown is a railroad station alongside the Foreign Office called "Gare d'Orsay." It is a little-used station. No important persons ever arrive there. But just a month ago this station became most important to the American people.

Just a stone's throw from it at the Quai d'Orsay, the gentlemen in the gray-striped pants continued busy at their professional task of maintaining the proper relations between countries. But at the Gare d'Orsay a new kind of foreign relations was taking shape—a project in amateur diplomacy straight from the hearts of the French people.

For on the platform of the Gare d'Orsay were piled thousands of gifts for the Merci Train, which arrives in New York harbor today, as France's gesture of gratitude to the American people.

At Christmas time—the deadline for gifts to the Merci Train—the Gare d'Orsay was by all odds the busiest place in France. More than anything else it resembled a child's notion of Santa Claus' workshop.

Merci, America

There were dolls and dishes, historical documents, and a Rodin statue so precious it should have been in a museum. There were busts of Benjamin Franklin and busts of Franklin Roosevelt; paintings by the French masters, lacework and fancy silk dresses; and battle-torn flags from ancient wars.

The Gare d'Orsay, before the train's departure, was packed and jammed. Crates were everywhere.

Finally they were all loaded into the old but now freshly painted boxcars labeled "40 hommes, 8 chevaux," which American soldiers knew so well in World War I. Then, after a journey to Havre, they were hoisted aboard the SS. Magellan, which today steams up New York harbor to salute the Statute of Liberty—the only similar gift of friendship from the people of any nation to the people of the United States.

Truman on Injunctions

Only the palace guard know it, but the Administration's new labor bill was held up at the last minute by President Truman himself so that three major changes could be made.

One was a strong injunction clause to enable the Government to crack down on John L. Lewis or any other labor leader who staged a strike endangering the national health and welfare.

This was stricken out at the last minute.

Here's the inside story of how the changes came about:

One hour before Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin was scheduled to appear before the Senate Labor Committee on Friday morning, Charles Murphy, the White House legislative representative, reported to Truman that there was still disagreement on the strike injunction clause.

Truman immediately instructed Secretary Tobin to cancel his appearance before the Senate Committee and to meet at the White House at 3 p. m. Friday. At the ensuing conference were the President himself, Tobin, Murphy, Attorney General Tom Clark, Assistant John Steelman and Clark Clifford.

Ensued a pitched battle over blue-pencilling the injunction ban on strikes endangering public health and welfare.

Clifford and Justice Department lawyers—except for Attorney General Clark—contended the injunction clause should be left in the bill. Steelman and Tobin wanted it out, argued that it was a gratuitous prejudgment of labor.

As the argument continued, the President, who originally favored injunctions, finally agreed that it might arouse too much labor resentment, do more harm than good.

Clark Clifford disagreed.

Finally Truman settled it.

If you knew the history of injunctions and the hardships they caused labor as I do, he said in effect, you would take a different slant on the subject. I realize as much as anybody that it is necessary to use the injunction at times—and I have used it on several occasions myself in serious emergencies—but I don't blame labor leaders for protesting against the practice.
